Luxuries—22 Billions
What Is an Insult?
Los Angeles Cuts Rates
Own Your State

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1921.

This country in 1920 spent for luxuries twenty-two billions and seven hundred millions of dollars. It seems incredible, but the figures are given in detail. That amount is greater than all the money that the nation has spent for education since it first started.

Such figures tell more about civilization in the United States than you might read in many volumes.

For the outside of the body alone, face powder, cosmetics, perfume, rouge, lip stick, etc., this nation spent seven hundred and fifty millions last year. For cigarettes it spent eight hundred millions, for cigars five hundred and ten millions, for jewelry five hundred millions.

One fact stands out, we evidently have money to spend if we WANT to spend it.

"What is an insult?" Answer that question offhand, then read of Mr. Edwin P. Kilroe, distinguished lawyer and public official. He denies that he insulted Mrs. Bourasse as they were riding together in an automobile.

Mr. Kilroe says he called the lady "crazy" and "liar" but did not INSULT her. How do you mean you did not insult her? you might ask. To this Mr. Kilroe replies: "I did not put my arm around her." As civilization progresses words change their meaning.

The hotels of Los Angeles have cut prices, some taking off half. It is a pleasure to spread this good news in many cities.

The cost of living never did go up in Los Angeles as in other places. Housekeeping there is a joy; a dollar buys two dollars' worth. Now hotel cut prices. Make your reservations for this Spring and for next Winter.

In New Jersey the village of Tavistock is incorporated, by nineteen prosperous gentlemen, to avoid Sunday blue laws, that prevented golf. In new Tavistock you may play golf three hundred and sixty-five days a year. The village has nineteen residents, and nineteen village jobs, one for each resident, an improvement even on ancient Athens.

Why does not some prosperous group buy an entire State? It is not impossible. Rhode Island, for instance, which is small and did not indorse prohibition.

Owning a State, a group of men could make laws to suit themselves, appoint two Senators, declare champagne "non-intoxicating," thus avoiding the prohibition amendment, issue unlimited State securities, free of income tax, enabling the residents to avoid taxation. Pleasant possibilities are in a privately-owned State, with Newport for its Summer capital, Providence for its Winter capital, and no local tax on personal property or income.

The big telephone company raises its rates thirty per cent., in some places, and at the same time, without waiting for the rate increase, raises its dividends to nine per cent. Little companies, owned by the big one, do the same. They sweetly explain that this is done to keep up the price of stock, enabling the company to sell more stock if it wants to.

How simple. Charge the people more, pay nine per cent., or eighteen per cent., or whatever may be desired, raise your prices in proportion, sell more stock in case you want more money to extend your system further, then raise your rates higher. Increase your dividends again, then sell more stock.

No reason why that should not go on forever, unless the people wake up, and at present they are sleeping soundly.

Roman Leondowski, ex-convict, was distressed by his own bad character. He had melancholy and suicidal fits, felt inclined to attack others. X-rays found two bullets in his brain and he explained that he had been "in a fuss."

Eight surgeons predicted disaster, when Leondowski said, "I will take a chance." And they watched Dr. Chapman take the chance.

Weak from ill health, Dr. Chapman was wheeled to Leondowski's operating room in an invalid chair and performed the operation sitting down. He cut a hole in the skull as big as a silver dollar, found the first bullet two inches below the surface, loosened it, worked it over three inches to the side of the skull, brought it upward and out through the opening. The bullet was half an inch long, flattened, with jagged edges.

The second bullet, wrapped up by nature in a sack of brain tissue, was left safely where it was. Leondowski feels better, may be entirely cured. Dr. Chapman has gone back to bed. This is an age of wonderful scientific accomplishment.

How do you suppose the ancient semi-civilized people of South America performed trephining operations on the skull, when they had no chloroform or other anesthetic, and no instruments of steel?

'HIGH COST' AND 'WASTE' BLAMED IN BUILDING PROBE

BRITAIN GUILTY OF MURDER IN IRELAND

CHAMBER REPORT ON HOUSING CRISIS

Commerce Committee Finds Excessive Material Costs and Labor Inefficiency

Unjustifiably high costs of building material and "labor's waste and inefficiency" are responsible for the stagnation in building in Greater Boston, according to a report made today by a special committee of the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

This committee was appointed to probe the building famine in December, 1920, and held many public hearings.

It consisted of James E. McConnell, chairman; Edmund Billings, Charles T. Main and Frederick S. Snyder.

Today's report hints that the "unaccountably high costs" of building materials may be due in part to the action of speculative dealers in keeping prices up "in anticipation of a demand in the Spring."

The report continues: "In the face of practically no demand, the prices have held firm and the recessions have been few in number and very gradual.

"Your committee finds that in the period of rising prices the normal operation of the law of supply and demand was exaggerated and resulted in exorbitant and unjustifiable prices in many cases."

The committee makes the following pointed reference to "profits made by dealers in building materials:

"The committee finds that in 1920 the material men made a higher net profit than ever before, in spite of the fact that they were doing business under the highest expense in their history.

"From the stump to the building.

HULL REFUSES TO PAY FOR TROLLEY SERVICE

Voters in the town of Hull have refused to act on the "bluff" of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway trustees. Although thousands of Summer residents will be affected by the discontinuance of the town's only street car line, the Selectmen have refused to call a special meeting of the voters to appropriate money for the maintenance of the Hingham and Hull line.

3 DEAD, 15 HURT IN SEWER GAS BLAST

Youngstown, O., March 31.—Three persons are reported dead and fifteen were said to have been injured today when an explosion of sewer gas occurred at No. 132 Northwest avenue. The building was occupied by two families.

COAL AND BREAD PRICES REDUCED AT NEWPORT

Newport, R. I., March 31.—At a meeting of coal dealers it was decided to make the new figure $16.25 a ton on all sizes of white ash, beginning April 1. The price had been $17, the previous drop being from $18 to $17. Bread which used to sell at 10 cents a loaf is now 10 cents, while the price of the 11-cent loaf has been dropped to 10 cents.

TWO OVERCOME BY COAL GAS IN DORCHESTER

Mrs. Dora Mitchell, Injured in Fall, and Six-Year-Old Daughter Rescued

Suffering from coal gas poisoning, which had also affected her six-year-old daughter Lillian, Mrs. Dora Mitchell fell down a flight of stairs and sustained severe injuries at her home, No. 23 Savin Hill avenue, Dorchester, early today.

Mother and daughter were sent to the City Hospital, where Mrs. Mitchell was also treated for multiple contusions to the head and body.

According to the police the woman was awakened by a strong odor of coal gas. She went to the cellar stairs with the intention of opening the furnace drafts, but became faint and fell. Other occupants of the house heard the noise of the fall and summoned the ambulance.

WOMEN FIGHT FOREST FLAMES WITH BROOMS

Oneco, Ct., March 31.—Armed with brooms, mops and wet gunnysacks, local women, in contrast to the famous Mrs. Partington, who fought a losing battle with the sea, stemmed the tide of a forest fire which threatened the home of a widow and five small children. A half dozen fires along the State line recently have been fought by women equally as well as by men.

POLICE SHOOT NEW BEDFORD MADMAN

SCORES IN PERIL BY MANIAC'S FUSILLADE

Window and Subdued Only After Being Wounded

New Bedford, March 31.—Scores of men, women and children were imperilled today when Anton Oliveira de Souza, a Brazilian, opened fire with a revolver upon pedestrians and autoists from the window of his lodging house in Purchase street.

The murderous fusillade was halted only after a pitched battle between the madman and the police in which he was wounded in both wrists.

Twenty policemen, commanded by Lieutenant Charles L. McHay, were rushed to the Purchase street neighborhood as soon as word of the bombardment reached headquarters.

The Brazilian refused to surrender and opened fire on the police. The house was surrounded and the maniac was shot through both wrists by Lieutenant McHay, a crack shot, who had taken his position behind a tree across the street.

Even after he was wounded De Souza kept up a desultory fire, and the police finally rushed his stronghold and overcame him by weight of numbers. No policeman or citizen was wounded.

Lieutenant McHay stated that De Souza was well supplied with ammunition and had barricaded himself in preparation for a siege.

The man, who is about thirty-five years old, came here about two weeks ago. He was taken to the police station today and adjudged insane, and will probably be committed to an institution when his wounds are treated.

SHIP WITH $1,000,000 CARGO IN PERIL

Prince Line Freighter From Boston for New York Stranded in Nantucket Sound

The Prince line freighter Gaelic Prince, with a cargo valued at more than $1,000,000, is aground on the Great Round shoal, Nantucket Sound.

The coastguard cutter Acushnet is hastening to her assistance, although she is reported to be in no immediate danger.

The Gaelic Prince left Boston yesterday for New York, to discharge the remainder of her cargo, brought here from Hong Kong, Manila and Singapore.

It is believed that, tricked by the fog, her captain mistook the Great Round Shoal light for the course light.

According to messages from the craft her bow is out of water, and there is some fear that her back is broken.

The first word of her plight came in a radio message picked up by Captain Frank E. Harrison, commanding Coastguard Station No. 45. Captain Harrison and his crew of nine men launched their lifeboat and started for the ship.

Geneva, March 31.—A German note protesting the allied indemnity penalties and further occupation of German territory by allied troops has been received by the League of Nations, it was announced today at the headquarters of the league.

Report Stillman Will Quit the Country

New York, March 31.—Is James A. Stillman, president of the National City Bank and one of the principal figures in the country's most celebrated divorce cases, about to leave America for Europe?

Reports widely circulated today tended to give an affirmative answer to the query.

It was declared that the banker, smarting under the criticism aroused by his attack on his wife and the birthright of baby Guy Stillman, has ordered his father's house in Paris made ready for immediate occupancy.

It was added that departure from the United States at this time would mean the virtual abandonment of the suit for divorce which Stillman has brought against his wife. Lawyers pointed out that such a development would leave the baby, Guy, in pos-

Fake 'Divorce Mill' Is Found in New York

New York, March 31.—When the Westchester County Grand Jury meets a week from today it will be asked to indict a man charged by District Attorney Leh V. Davis with running a fake divorce mill from an office in Manhattan.

This man, according to the evidence now in the hands of the prosecutor, forged the names of Supreme Court justices to decrees of divorce and in some cases even has forged and filed minutes of divorce proceedings, which never saw the light in a court.

Supreme Court Justice Arthur S. Tompkins was named as one of those whose names had been forged.

British Take Official Notice of Charges

Washington, March 31.—The British government will take official cognizance of the charges made by the American Commission on Conditions in Ireland, whose report, published today after several months' hearings, strongly condemns the British Irish policy. It was announced that the British embassy here would issue an official statement on the commission's report late this afternoon.

CARS IN HARVARD SQUARE SUBWAY CRASH; 1 HURT

Conductor Taken to Hospital and Many Passengers Are Badly Shaken Up

One man was injured, a number complained of being badly shaken up and others said they suffered minor injuries when a semi-convertible North Cambridge car crashed into another car with a trailer at the Mt. Auburn loading platform in the subway under Harvard square today.

The injured man was Conductor Larcrit, who was removed to the Cambridge Hospital. His condition is not serious.

According to the police, there were from sixty-five to seventy passengers on the semi-convertible car and six on the two-car train. The sound of the impact reverberated through the subway and caused considerable excitement. Someone summoned the police ambulance from Station 4, Cambridge, and a crowd collected outside when it stopped in front of the subway station.

The officials of the Elevated road are investigating.

Trailer Breaks Away and Sideswiped Car

Breaking apart at a switch at Beaver street and Humboldt avenue, Dorchester, a semi-convertible car and trailer tied up traffic at 9 a. m. today and caused a commotion among 300 passengers or more. No one was injured, though several were shaken up.

The front truck of the trailer car struck the switch and swerved on the Humboldt avenue track, causing the coupling point which connected the car with the other to snap.

Another car on the opposite track was sideswiped by the trailer.

PRINCESS GIVES UP NEWPORT AS RESIDENCE

Newport, R. I., March 31.—Princess Anastasia, formerly Mrs. William H. Leeds, has given up Newport as her legal residence, and has so notified the Board of Tax Assessors here. She was taxed on $600,000 intangible personal property. The Princess is still the owner of a large villa, Rough Point, and will have to pay real estate taxes on a valuation of $174,000. On her last visit to Newport, several Summers ago, her $340,000 pearl necklace was on view in a case under an armed guard.

BOY HANGS HIMSELF AT PLAY ON CLOTHES RACK

Manchester, N. H., March 31.—Five-year-old Gerarde Arthur Roman of No. 112 Bay street, accidentally hanged himself while at play. He had fastened his skipping rope to his mother's revolving clothes drying rack, so that there were two nooses. As he swung from the rack to jump to a bank nearby, his head caught in one of the nooses. Children saw him hanging and told his mother, but he was dead when taken from the rope. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Enman.

U. S. COMMISSION BARES CRUELTIES

The Boston American today prints the first of a series of nine articles, containing the gist of the remarkable report of the American Commission on Conditions in Ireland, just made public. This report is the result of months of investigation, made by Americans, most of them not of Irish blood. It is an unqualified indictment of the British government. The articles will appear daily, beginning today.

Great Britain has been tried and found guilty of sabotage, terrorism, arson and assassination in its attempt to govern the Irish people against their will.

The jury was the American Commission on Conditions in Ireland—an impartial body composed mainly of Americans of English blood and tradition.

The report of that jury, made public today, constitutes the most scathing arraignment of British imperialism in Ireland that was ever penned.

Facts and statistics convicting the British government of conniving at countless crimes are marshalled in merciless array in this remarkable document.

Inside it the most unrestrained attack of the most ardent Irish partisans seems negligible.

Its conclusions constitute an indictment, neither more nor less—an indictment in seven counts.

The Boston American will publish this remarkable report on conditions in Ireland practically complete.

It will be run in nine instalments, the first appearing here today.

The Commission on Conditions in Ireland has been in session in Washington for many months.

The body was a subdivision of the

SIX KILLED BY SINN FEINERS IN NEW BATTLE

Police Said to Have Suffered Heavily in Ross Carberry Conflict

By International News Service.

London, March 31.—Six policemen were reported killed and fourteen wounded in a sanguinary battle with Sinn Feiners at Ross Carberry Barracks today, according to a Central News dispatch from Cork. The Sinn Feiners were said to have suffered heavy casualties. It was impossible to confirm the report or to get any additional details owing to the fact that all wires from Ross Carberry were cut. Ross Carberry has been the scene of violent fighting between Black and Tans and Republicans in the past.

PLAN TO RUSH SEARCHING PROBE INTO "L" STOCK SCANDAL

NO OPPOSITION EXPECTED FROM SENATE OR HOUSE

Determined to cut all the red-tape and hurdle all the technical legal objections raised to prevent the disclosure of 1918 legislators alleged to have borrowed money on unsecured notes to dabble in Elevated stock when the "L." bill was pending in the Legislature, the Senate Rules Committee voted to report an order for the creation of a special committee with unlimited power to make a sweeping probe of the entire scandal.

The order was reported by unanimous vote of the Senate Rules Committee of which president of the Senate Frank G. Allen is chairman.

Under its terms, a committee of five members will be created, two to be appointed by President Allen and three to be named by Speaker Young. None of the investigators will be members who served in 1918.

The committee will be given complete authority to summons all the books and papers of the closed trust companies and to demand the presence of all persons and documents which may be any bearing in the matter.

The investigation will be completed by May 15.

President Allen announced that the order will be presented in the Senate this afternoon. He expressed the opinion that it will be adopted without opposition. It then will be hurried to the House for similar action, and if is expected that before nightfall, the special committee will have begun an exhaustive probe of a scandal that will prove far-reaching and sensational.

ALL RAILROADS INCLUDED.

An interesting feature of the order is that it does not confine the activities of the special committee to the Elevated situation but directs that all street railway matters in the 1918 session be examined. This provision was intended to include the passage of the old Bay State Street Railway bill as well.

The decision of the Senate Rules Committee followed an exchange of letters between Lieutenant-Governor Fuller and Bank Commissioner Allen in which Fuller demands to know what Allen was doing to obtain the names in the closed trust companies and Allen said he had asked the Attorney-General if there were any legal objections to the supplying of the list.

FULLER'S CHARGES.

Fuller charged that an attempt was being made to conceal the names and declared that public opinion would destroy the attempt at concealment, he said.

"I have tried in a dignified and constructive manner to secure the names of the members of the General Court; if any, who were buying and selling Elevated stock in 1918 at the time legislation was being enacted that would influence the market price of that stock, and I contend that Bank Commissioner Allen two weeks ago and received his assurance that a list of the names would be furnished if he received the request from the Governor's Council. In accord with this request, I note that the ordinary business-like language and they called upon the Attorney-General to base upon its legal phraseology. He changed a comma here and there and then approved it. I then submitted it to the Governor's Council, where it passed unanimously. I must admit that since that time the opposition has been forced upon me that the Bank Commissioner would not furnish the names as required, but that some less drastic method would be substituted by those who apparently have been moving heaven and earth to halt this investigation. Only this morning the Bank Commissioner would consent to answer my questions only in the presence of his counsel, Mr. Wyman.

"It appears to be a rather complicated piece of business to undertake to give the people of this state information in regard to their business and the action of their representatives. I believe public opinion will torpedo the craft these men who are attempting to smother this investigation have set sail in. I don't see why the Bank Commissioner cannot be fully and freely with me in regard to this matter unless he has something to conceal. After two weeks it would seem reasonable to inquire if and when we are to receive the names of those legislators, if there were such who were found to be buying and selling stocks, affected by legislation under consideration at that time."

New York, March 31.—Peggy Marsh, now Mrs. Albert Johnson, who previous to her marriage became the mother of a child by Henry Field, heir to the Marshall Field millions, denies that the claim she brought against the Field estate has been settled.

Henry Field was the grandson of the first Marshall Field, who left a large estate. Marshall Field, 3d, another grandson, paid an allowance to the actress, but refused to acknowledge her claim to a share in his brother's estate. The claim is still pending and the court decision may be expected in April.

HAPGOOD TELLS OF MOVE TO FREE DEBS

Says Amnesty Program Is Approved by Many Others Besides Socialists

By NORMAN HAPGOOD.
Staff Correspondent of Boston American.

Washington, March 31.—There seems to be a good deal of doubt about the attitude of the American Federation of Labor toward amnesty effort that focusses here on April 13 the anniversary of Debs' imprisonment and the fiftieth anniversary of Lincoln's death. The amnesty committee of the A. F. of L. did some hard work to make the meeting of those days a success.

Norman Hapgood

What it took a stand against, however, is not clear. One was picketing the White House, which has been dropped and other demonstrations proposed by Eugene Debs himself. The other was a demonstration to Congress up on the hill. The matter will be called off. On the remaining parts of the program all the labor elements are in accord.

I shall have to get after Mr. Gompers before long as I am hard about his continued complaint of fear and ignorance in favor of the practical boycott of Russia that I should be sorry to see him put in a wrong position about the amnesty work. A mistake has grown up, I think, out of the double use of the word "demonstration." It was used to describe the proposal to carry on some kind of an affair before Congress and was read as meaning the whole program of the two days.

On that program there are several points that stand out as interesting and every one of them is as legitimate, at least, as the presence of the leaders of the organizations, with whom this town is not crowded. I do not profess that my respectable friends will believe this but there are a number of things my respectable friends do not grasp.

A resolution for general amnesty, formerly introduced by Senator France, will be reintroduced by him, and the same resolution will be introduced in the House. The only existing offence of opinion is on whether the petition that is being signed all over the country should be brought to Capitol Hill by a delegation, marching quietly from the Union Station, or whether it should merely be handed to Senator Sterling of the judiciary committee and to some one member of the House. That seems a fairly small point to have any trouble about. It would be ludicrous for two groups, both believing in amnesty, to fall out over such a trifle.

The real question is this: Suppose that point is yielded, will the amnesty committee of the American Federation go on with its work and take part in the proceedings?

The main features of the two days' proceedings are entirely settled and entirely agreed upon. They are not Socialistic. They represent all shades of liberal opinion. The Farmer-Labor party holds a convention here a couple of days before the amnesty days and they will leave a delegation to take part in that day's proceedings.

In the first place there is the petitioner from all over the country. Many of the unions working to swell this petition are members of the A. F. of L. Then there is the mass meeting to be addressed mainly by speakers who are not Socialists. Indeed, it is now planned that there will be only one Socialist speaker. Among those who are asked to address the mass meeting are Senator France, Jane Addams and Rev. John Haynes Holmes, and such labor leaders as John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, and Johnson of the Machinists.

Two visits will be made by small delegations. One is to President Harding and the appointment has been already made. The speakers will be selected not for their views on Socialism, but for their views on freedom and the tyranny of war. A delegation, different in personnel, but similar in quality and numbers, will make a visit to Mr. Daugherty.

There will also be a visit to Washington by a special delegation of clergymen, now being selected by the Rev. Percy Stickney Grant.

Among those who have signed the petition is M. H. Karnes, Republican State chairman in Georgia, where Debs is confined. He signs, however not for Debs alone, but for all similar prisoners.

I wish anybody who happens to be in a library would get the late quarterly review and read Pollock, the famous legal authority, on American punishments for dissenting opinions. Of the Abrams case he says: "For a similar offence in England the usual sentence would be six months or twelve at the outside."

SLAVE VICTIM RESTORED TO HER PARENTS

Mourned Five Years as Dead, Girl's Home Located by Brockton Society

Brockton, March 31.—The Ladies' Hebrew Benevolent Society of Brockton is responsible for a happy reunion that took place in a wealthy New York home when Rebecca Zetlin was restored to the family that had mourned her as dead for more than five years.

The young girl left her home in New York about five years ago with a man whom she thought she loved. She told Mrs. Joseph Dushman of No. 85 Plymouth street, this city, a member of the Benevolent Society, that she was led into a life of slavery by the man and that two years ago in New Bedford she broke away and has since been an inmate of the Taunton State Hospital.

She was found early one morning, scantily clad and with a broken leg and was sent to Taunton for observation.

Since that time she has carefully concealed her identity. A few weeks ago she drank lodine and Mrs. Dushman was called to her bedside.

TUFTS CHARGES RAMEY ALIBI IS FALSE

In Closing Argument to Jury He Accuses Witnesses for Defence of Perjury

District Attorney Nathan A. Tufts resumed his closing argument to the jury when the case of Frank S. Ramey, charged with assault upon pretty Mildred Wannamaker, October 6 last, reopened in the East Cambridge Superior Criminal Court today.

Mr. Tufts declared that "both the direct and the circumstantial evidence in this case inevitably point to Ramey as the man who assaulted this girl."

The argument for the defense, he added, as well as the testimony of witness in support of the defense claim of an alibi, "were intended merely to throw dust in the eyes of the jury, and would not bear close scrutiny."

He declared repeatedly that witnesses for the defense had "undoubtedly falsified their testimony."

"It is absurd to question the testimony given here by Miss Wannamaker," continued the district attorney.

WOULD ABOLISH NOMINATION BY VOTERS DIRECT

Bill to Restore Convention System for State Officers Reported

One of the biggest fights in the Legislature for years was foreshadowed today when the Committee on Elections reported a bill, filed by Representative Herbert Burr of Dorchester, providing for the nomination by the convention system of candidates for the Secretary of State, State Treasurer, State Auditor and Attorney-General.

This would abolish direct nomination.

One section of the measure provides that no person not a duly elected delegate shall be permitted to vote in a convention. This does away with the old system of proxy voting so familiar t cold-time politicians.

Any person who is not a delegate and votes or attempts to vote will be fined $1,000 or imprisoned for a year.

There are three dissenters from the bill, Senator Quinn of Swampscott, Representative Senacal of Chicopee and Representative Stratton of Cambridge.

ETHER GIVEN WESTFIELD CHILDREN; ARRESTS ARE EXPECTED

TAKE DRUG TO DULL HUNGER

Cans of Ether Said to Have Been Sold Freely to Boys and Girls

Westfield, March 31.—Wholesale arrests are expected shortly, following the amazing discovery that certain parents are administering ether to their children to deaden their hunger and save food.

State officials are investigating the facts in response to a clamorous public demand that something be done.

Conditions uncovered by physicians here are declared to rival the most brutal tales of the Russian realistic writers, dealing with the Russian peasantry.

Not only have small boys and girls been given ether on sugar to dull their appetites, but it is stated that it has become a practice in some households to administer ether to the youngsters in the family after supper to keep them quiet.

These startling facts were brought out as a result of a physical examination of many underweight children attending the Port Meadow school.

One small boy stated that he did not get enough to eat at home, but that his appetite was destroyed by some nauseating liquid sprinkled on sugar. Questioning of other children revealed that the nauseating substance was ether. Further questioning showed that the custom was general in a certain section of Westfield.

In some cases the children testified their parents compelled them themselves to get the ether at the local drug stores.

Doubtful that children could procure the beverage, Superintendent of Schools Nelson was startled when seven-year-old boy to a drugstore. He returned with a can of ether.

A boy of ten was taken to the laboratory of Professor Lewis H. Allen and a test showed beyond question that he was drugged with ether. Girls with gaunt, pinched faces and boys who never play are said to be the result of this inhuman practice.

Some of the parents who are suspected of drugging their own children have the excuse of abject poverty. Some of the fathers have not been able to get work for months and cannot put enough food on their tables to properly nourish their large families.

In other cases it is said that sheer miserliness is the answer.

JUDGE LINDSEY FACES YEAR'S JAIL SENTENCE

Denver, March 31.—Judge Ben B. Lindsey, head of the famous Juvenile Court of Denver, must pay a fine of $500 together with costs of court, or go to jail for one year as the result of the refusal of the supreme court of Colorado to hear his appeal from the finding of a lower court convicting him of contempt.

The judge was found guilty of contempt when he refused to betray the confidences of a penitent in the custody of his court. The boy had been a witness in a murder trial.

PROBE OF ELWELL MURDER REOPENED

New York, March 31.—The inquiry into the murder of Joseph Bowne Elwell, noted whist expert, has been reopened, according to word today. Mention was made that Charles S. Whitman, former governor, would probe the mysterious murder from new angles.

Elwell's body was found early June 11, last year, in a chair of the living room of his handsomely furnished house on West Seventieth street.

WOMEN JOIN IN DORCHESTER TAX FIGHT

Mass Meeting to Strike Blow at Over-Assessments to Be Held Friday Night

Dorchester citizens will strike their first blow at what they allege is over-taxation Friday night at a mass meeting in Dorchester High School hall, Codman square. The meeting will be under the auspices of the Tax Payers' League of Dorchester. Former Mayor James M. Curley will speak on "Why Dorchester Is Over-taxed, and the Reasons At City Hall."

There will be motion pictures and stereopticon views of Dorchester real estate, which, it is charged, is overassessed. Many women are expected at the meeting. Among those who have been prominent in the fight against the alleged discrimination are Mrs. John F. Ford, Mrs. W. B. Edelblute, Mrs. W. E. Mullett, Mrs. Charles Noonan and Mrs. C. Norwood. William J. Fallon is chairman of the committee which arranged the meeting.

STOCKHOLDERS PLAN RAILROAD LABOR PROBE

New York, March 31. — A special committee to inquire into the question of the settlement of labor differences between the railroads and their employes was appointed at a meeting of the executive committee of the National Association of Owners of Railroad Securities held at No. 60 Broadway.

A letter was sent to the heads of the four railroad brotherhoods suggesting a conference to be held in this city April 4.

HELD ON CHARGE OF IMPERSONATING OFFICER

Providence, March 31.—Raymond L. McDevitt of No. 48 Cleveland street, Pawtucket, pleaded not guilty to a charge of conspiring to represent himself as a Federal officer when arraigned before U. S. Commissioner A. C. Matteson. He was held in the sum of $2,000 for hearing on April 15. His arrest resulted from the alleged hold up and assault at the home of Edmund Wood in Woonsocket. It is alleged that McDevitt and several other men impersonated revenue officers and searched for liquor.

FIND MISSING REVERE MAN'S BODY IN HARBOR

Isaac Sherman, thirty-six years old, of No. 15 Walnut avenue, Revere, who ran the Old South Novelty Store on Washington street prior to his disappearance December 1 of last year, was identified by relatives in Revere as the man whose body was found floating off Pier 47, Charlestown.

Responsible For 1,000,000 Armenian Deaths

Talaat Pasha, the former Grand Vizier of Turkey, personally planned for the wholesale murder of more than a million Armenians. Not only must they have died but they must have met their fate in a most cruel and pitiful manner. This beast in human form was finally tracked down by a relative of one of his victims. The chase lasted for years. What the Pasha did to deserve his fate and how justice was finally accomplished is told and illustrated in next Sunday's Boston Advertiser (Magazine Section).

'ROMEO' KEYS IN SUIT NAMES TWO MEN

Gives Hanley, Garage Keeper, and Lawson as Corespondents in Divorce Action

John J. Hanley of Somerville, proprietor of a Charlestown garage, who is named by "Romeo" Keys as one of two corespondents in his sensational divorce suit against Florence Girardin Keys, former elevator operator at the Harvard Club, announced today that he is not going to make any fight to disprove the charges brought by Keys.

When asked if he intended to engage an attorney to defend him, Hanley replied:

"No. I've had enough publicity as it is. I'm not looking for any more."

In his suit, brought in the Suffolk County Superior Court, Keys names another corespondent, Henry Lawson of No. 172 West Brookline street, South End. He has made no comment upon the charges brought by Keys.

In October, 1918, John Baker Keys, Harvard graduate, clubman and wealthy retired contractor, came to Boston from Cincinnati with the fires of youth rekindled in his sixty-three-old frame, seeking a vent in romance and excitement. He had hardly registered at the Harvard Club there when he encountered both and experiences that followed read like a veritable scenario of a movie thriller.

WOOED HER ARDENTLY.

His wooing of Miss Girardin, who was living in Dorchester, began on first sight in the elevator. Dinners, dances, theatres and auto parties swept the nineteen-year-old girl off her feet. So public was the ardent courtship that he soon won the sobriquet of "Romeo."

Keys alleges infidelity at New York on September 10, 1920; at Concord, on June 17, 1919, and at divers other places in Massachusetts and New York.

SCOUTS SEEK LOST WINCHENDON MAN

Winchendon, March 31.—Although two troops of Boy Scouts aided the police in a thorough search of the dense woods on the Massachusetts-New Hampshire line, no trace was found of Alfred LaFrenier, who disappeared from his home Wednesday morning and who is believed to be somewhere in the woods. The search was continued today but with little hope in the minds of the searchers that the young man will be found alive.

WALLACE TO FIGHT IN STOKES DIVORCE CASE

New York, March 31.—Edgar T. Wallace, wealthy California oil operator, who was named as the eighth co-respondent in the divorce suit of W. E. D. Stokes, millionaire, against Mrs. Helen E. Stokes, filed a notice of appearance in the Supreme Court through his attorneys. The action amounts to formal notice that Wallace intends to challenge the list of witnesses for Stokes who told of numerous alleged visits of Mrs. Stokes to Wallace's apartment.

HELD IN INTERSTATE AUTOMOBILE THEFTS

Bridgeport, Ct., March 31.—Elizardo Sulsonna, twenty-seven years old, of New York, has been arrested by the authorities of this city on charges of complicity in interstate automobile thievery. He was held in $2,500 for further hearing. Sulsonna had twenty Connecticut and New York registration plates in his possession.

COAL WORKERS WILL HOLD MASS MEETING

President John J. Fenton will preside tonight at the mass meeting of the Amalgamated Coal Teamsters and Helpers' Union in the Wells Memorial Hall, No. 885 Washington street. It is expected that more than 1,000 will attend. The wage scale and hours of labor will be discussed.

PLAN UNIQUE TOMB FOR JOHN BURROUGHS

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., March 31.—A burial plot high in the Catskill Mountains at Roxbury will hold the remains of John Burroughs, and large boulder upon which the naturalist played as a small boy, will form a headstone for the grave. A landscape artist has been engaged to plan a small park around the grave.

WORCESTER TROLLEY MEN GO ON FIVE-DAY WEEK

Worcester, March 31. — About 200 employes of the track, shop and line departments of the Worcester Consolidated Street Railway will start working a five-day week Saturday in place of a six-day week. The change is said to be a temporary one during a lull in business.

FOREST FIRE HALTED; FOUR HOMES SAVED

Plymouth, March 31.—More than 150 acres of Clark's Valley was swept by a forest fire. The blaze was halted just before it reached the homes of F. White, Harry Swift, Charles B. Howland and Charles Rogers.

FALL RIVER DEALERS CUT COAL PRICES

Fall River, March 31.—Reductions in the prices of coal ranging from 75 cents to two dollars a ton, according to sizes, is announced by the local dealers.

Poet Marries Great Heiress

History repeats itself. Robert McAlmon, a poor poet, from a Greenwich Village garret, wins the daughter of Sir John Ellerman with his "free verse," in exactly the same manner that the poet Rizzio won the love of Mary Queen of Scots. The details of this fascinating romance in next Sunday's Boston Advertiser.

Gould Fights Divorce Suit

Edith Kelly Gould, former chorus girl and wife of the expatriate millionaire, Frank J. Gould, whose action for a divorce is being fought by her husband.

New York, March 31.—The Goulds—Frank J. and Edith K.—have the right of way in the divorce court today.

The marital mixup of the expatriate millionaire and the former chorus girl will come before Supreme Court Justice Mullan in the form of an application by Gould to dismiss the suit for divorce filed against him by his wife.

Mrs. Gould was divorced by her husband in Paris on grounds set on the technical ground of desertion. She was accused of undue intimacy with Mario Cassaux, a Princeton student who drove an American ambulance during the war.

For this infraction of the morals code, Mrs. Gould and the handsome young Mexican were fined $10 each in Paris.

Mrs. Gould did not appear in Paris to contest her husband's suit, but after the decree was granted she attacked the jurisdiction of the court and filed suit in this city.

She has engaged formidable financial supports from her husband. Her attorneys indicated today that they would fight to the highest court the attempt of the husband to have the suit dismissed.

SOUND TOM-TOM FOR ROXBURY POWWOW

"Fitz" to Attend Tammany Conclave at Which Curley Will Launch Campaign

From the old Ward 17 Tammany Wigwam in Hamden and Dudley streets, Roxbury, comes word that two ex-Mayors will be the principal attraction at the powwow and warwhoop dance to be held in the Municipal Building, No. 144 Dudley street, this evening.

"The two ex-Mayors will be Jim Curley and Johnny Fitzgerald," says the press agent, Teddy Glynn.

Since the announcement was made by Glynn that Johnny Fitzgerald would attend the "warwhoop dance" and sing "Sweet Adeline" there have been many conferences in back rooms and afternoon teas. It is possible Mayor Peters may be present and take part in the cotillion.

Fitzgerald admitted to a reporter that he and Jim Curley are friendly and quoted the old saw which runs:

"To err is human; to forgive, divine."

Heating of tom-toms and adornment of war paint is scheduled to be a feature of the powwow, for, as Teddy Glynn says, "let it be known far and wide that 'Big Chief' Jim Curley will launch his campaign for Mayor that evening, and wants Johnny Fitzgerald to hear the beans and come out for the regular Tammany organization man."

Here is what the press agent has to say in his pronunciamento concerning Thursday night's powwow and warwhoop dance:

"Big Chief Jim Curley, founder of the Tammany Wigwam, will discuss the present political situation, unemployment, bad car service, high carfare, the proposed new Tammany clubhouse, soup kitchens, local celebrities and the coming mayoralty fight.

"It is expected that every political element in the State and city will be represented on that evening, and after the wardance and march by the Tammany braves the gathering will assemble in the banquet hall and proceed to smoke the pips of peace. John F. Fitzgerald is expected to sing 'Sweet Adeline' to 'soothe the savage breast.'"

CITIZENS HUNT ATTACKERS OF GIRLS

Wealthy Springfield Residents Form Vigilance Patrols to Catch Hugs

Springfield, March 31.—Aroused by attacks on women and young girls, a vigilance committee of 3,500 residents of the fashionable Forest Park section was organized here.

The first action taken was offering a reward of $1,000 for the arrest and conviction of the attacker of Madeline Barrus, aged 18, daughter of D. S. Barrus of No. 995 Sumner avenue, who was attacked near her home. Her attacker escaped.

Failure of the police to capture the offenders and continued insults and attacks on women have aroused the neighborhood to a fighting pitch.

The committee proposes to organize patrols with autos at their disposal. Members will take turns on duty while reserves will be within quick call at any hour of the night. Purchase of two or three bloodhounds is also contemplated.

There is considerable probability that the members will be sworn in as special officers and furnished with arms. A conference with Police Chief William J. Quill was scheduled for today.

It is claimed that there are not enough men on the force to properly patrol the outlying residential section.

Such prominent citizens as Horace A. Moses, president of the Strathmore Paper Company; E. Milton Altis, district manager of the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company; Leo Lay, vice-president of the Fred T. Ley Company, Inc.; Clark V. Wood, president of the Springfield Street Railway Company; the Rev. Ruben J. Goddard, pastor of Faith Congregational Church; John A. Sherley and W. H. Sadler, of the Eastern States Corporation; David C. Coe, lawyer; W. Hayden E. W. Woodruff and William H. Parks, president of the Eastern States Refrigerating Company, are enrolled on the committee.

'Good Husband,' Agree Bigamists' Wives

Worcester, March 31.—John E. Rawlston's two wives have upset all precedents in bigamy cases by agreeing that he is a good husband and by being unwilling to prosecute him.

"He's always treated me well, and I shall take no action against him. This is his scrape," said Mrs. Zena H. M. Rawlinson of 6 Pleasant terrace, Wife No. one, andmother of his three-year-old son.

Frank E. Hawes of North Grafton, father of Vivian Hawes Rawlston, who became Wife No. 2 on February 5, declared he considered his daughter legally married to Rawlston, and the first marriage to have been irregular.

Authorities are somewhat puzzled by the attitude of the women, as although Rawlston has been convicted of bigamy and sentenced to a year in jail he has appealed the sentence and will have to be tried again.

According to Mr. Hawes, Mrs. Zenia Rawlston visited his home and claimed to be Rawlston's legal wife six days after the man had married his daughter.

GIBBONS RESTS AMONG NOBLE CHURCHMEN

Body of Late Cardinal Entombed Near Font Where He Was Baptized

By International News Service.

Baltimore, March 31.—In a crypt beneath the high altar of the ancient gray cathedral church, hard by the baptismal font to which his parents brought him eighty-seven years ago, James Cardinal Gibbons, priest, prelate, patriot and dean of Cardinals in the Roman Catholic Church, was laid to his last great today.

His entombment with his predecessors in the archiepiscopal office—among them John Carroll, friend of Washington and of Franklin—came at the close of a requiem solemn with the liturgy which has grown up throughout the centuries and perfect in every detail from the processional which ushered in the ceremony to the recession which moved out of the church after the sepulchre had been closed with a marble slab.

At the conclusion of the solemn service in the Cathedral proper, attended by the largest and most notable assemblage of ecclesiastics ever gathered together in America there was a brief prayer. The cardinal's body carried the catafalque to its niche in the crypt, beneath the chancel, still lower, deeper than all that had gone before, prevaded the vast edifice and was broken only when the voice of Bishop Corrigan, auxiliar to the dead cardinal and now administrator of the Archdiocese was heard intoning the final prayers for the eternal repose of the dead prelate.

A great churchman and a great American had gone to his long sleep.

IN ROBES OF BISHOP.

Throughout the impressive ceremony the delicately fragile body of the venerable dead churchman, robed in a purple catafalque, vested as a bishop for the occasion of mass. Upon his head was the mitre, and about his slight shoulders fell the bishop's dalmatic.

The pontifical mass of requiem began at 10 a. m. Thousands surrounded the cathedral long before the procession of clergy, distinguished representatives of the United States national governments, as well as members of the diplomatic corps and their staffs, passed into the edifice.

The celebrant of the mass was the Most Rev. John Bonzano, D. C., papal delegate and thus the representative of the Pope himself. Archbishop Bonzano was aided by two deacons of honor, and then came the canon of the mass, the sub-deacon and the masters of ceremonies.

TWO CARDINALS PRESENT.

At the very end of the long procession which made its way through the nave, heavily draped with black and purple, were the ranking members of the heirarchy in America—Cardinal Dougherty of Boston and Cardinal in the United States, and Cardinal Begin of Quebec, ranking prelate in the province of Canada. They wore, besides the cardinal's red denoting membership in the Sacred College, the mitre and heavily brocaded cape of rare workmanship.

The funeral sermon was preached by Most Rev. J. J. Glenon, archbishop of Dubuque.

Just before the body was carried to the crypt the final absolution was pronounced by Archbishop Bonzano and such other minor ceremonies of committal were simple and occupied but a few minutes.

CLEVER PAIR

"Baby" Leonard and absent, Miss Alice Wood

A vaudeville and dance will be given by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Vison Chapter on Wednesday eve ning, April 6, in Beacon Hall, Coolidge Corner. The program includes a xylophone solo by J. Eiseman, songs by the Universal Trio, character studies by "Baby" Leonard, a violin solo by Bertha Fiedler of the Boston Symphony orchestra, a soprano solo by Mrs. Bernice Peyser, a specialty dance by Miss Alice Wood and a song and pianologue by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Phillips. "Baby" Leonard is known as a new imitator and protege of Harry Lauder. Alice Wood will present a boy number, a Pavlowa waltz and a Grecian dance.

The celebrant of the mass was the Most Rev. John Bonzano, D. C., papal delegate and thus the representative of the Pope himself. Archbishop Bonzano was aided by two deacons of honor, and then came the canon of the mass, the sub-deacon and the masters of ceremonies.

WEST ROXBURY WOMEN'S TREE PLAN WINS

Their Arborial Decorations Plan With Respect to New Boulevard to Be Carried Out

Gentle peace descended upon West Roxbury early today with the circulation of a long-looked for announcement that the members of the executive committee of the West Roxbury Citizens' Association had voted unanimously that the ladies of that important residential district—as represented by the West Roxbury Women's Club—had "the right of it" in the position they have taken with respect to the placing of trees along the new Centre street boulevard.

What should be done about the arborial decoration of the handsome new boulevard which, miles and miles in length and costing a whooping big sum will run from the vicinity of the Fairway at the way out to Charles river, has long been a matter of extreme interest to feminine West Roxbury.

AGREEMENT REACHED.

Representatives of the Women's Club took the matter up, many weeks ago, with Major Thomas F. Sullivan, commissioner of public works. An agreement was reached, first that the boulevard must be lined by trees, and second, that the trees should be placed between the curbstone and the outer edge of granolithic sidewalks.

Late in the campaign, it was said, one or two representatives of the street-tree idea displayed a somewhat belated interest in the subject, and took the ground that the trees should be placed on private property, on the inner side of the granolithic walk. This view was championed at a joint meeting of officers of the Women's Club and members of the executive committee of the Citizens' Association, in the vestry of the Congregational church, by Mrs. Frances L. Morse, a citizen who has done invaluable work for the improvement of the district for a long period.

PLAN ENDORSED.

The West Roxbury plan was represented at the conference by Mrs. Paul Peters, president; Mrs. William Mitchell, treasurer, and the following women, members of the committee: Mrs. A. D. Morgan, chairman; Mrs. Frank A. Day, Mrs. Lee Maxwell, Mrs. Charles H. Emerson, Mrs. Eugene H. McSweeney and Mrs. Herbert Fisher.

At the conclusion of the conference the Executive Committee of the Citizens' Association unanimously voted to endorse the plan of the Women's Club and the trees will be placed between the walk and the curb. There will be several hundred of them.

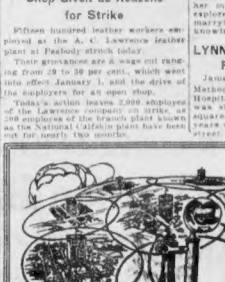
1500 LEATHER WORKERS QUIT AT PEABODY

Wage Cut and Drive for Open Shop Given as Reasons for Strike

Fifteen hundred leather workers employed at the A. C. Lawrence leather plant at Peabody struck today.

Their grievances are a wage cut ranging from 20 to 30 per cent., which went into effect January 1, and the drive of the employers for an open shop.

Today's action leaves 2,000 employes of the Lawrence company on strike, as 500 employees of the branch plant known as the National Alfalfin plant have been out for nearly two months.



Station-to-Station----Why?

The reason we can give you reductions of from 20 to 75 per cent on station-to-station toll calls, as compared with person-to-person calls, is because our operators can, by the former method, complete many more toll calls for a number, or for the listed name of a subscriber, than for a particular person; and because it saves much time lost in holding toll lines while a search is made for a particular person.

This is not philanthropy on our part—it's business. We believe the speed and saving effected for you will induce an even greater use of our toll lines on a station-to-station basis and thus increase rather than decrease our revenues.

A call made in any of the following ways is a station-to-station call and entitled to the lower station-to-station rate, as compared with a particular person call.

Robinson Machine Co., Springfield, Mass.—Anyone.
Residence of Joseph Brown, Burlington, Vt.—Anyone.
John Smith, Pittsfield, Mass.—Anyone.

"Collect" or "reversed charge" calls are not accepted at the station-to-station rate.

SWAMPSCOTT WOMAN'S MARRIAGE HELD VALID

Finding that she had married at Bellows Falls, Vt., in 1917, only three days after her first husband had been granted a decree of divorce, Judge Quinn in Superior Court, denied the petition of Bertha J. Knowlton, Swampscott, for annulment of the marriage of her marriage to Arthur L. Griffith, on the ground that the court found that in marrying Griffith, Mrs. Knowlton knowingly evaded the law.

LYNN AUTO INJURIES FATAL TO SAUGUS MAN

James Russell, treasurer of Saugus Methodist Church, is dead at Lynn Hospital from a fractured skull. He was struck by an auto in Franklin square. Russell was seventy-six years old and lived at No. 17 Vincent street, East Saugus.

HAWAII IS FLOODED WITH ANTI-U. S. PROPAGANDA

The tenth installment of the article on the Japanese "invasion" of Hawaii, by Joseph Timmons, printed in the Boston American today, shows how the Nipponese journals vie with Buddhist priests and schools to instill patriotic love for the empire throughout the United States possessions.

By JOSEPH TIMMONS

"I am delighted to see so many things here just as in Japan. I have enjoyed seeing our shrines and the red temples to Inari, the Fox God. This territory, at least, is one place where the colored races dominate the white race."

This statement was made in a speech delivered in Honolulu on October last and so reported in Nippu Jiji, the Japanese newspaper of largest circulation. The speaker was a Colonel Nagaye, a cavalry officer on the reserve list, who made a thorough "tour of inspection" through the islands.

Leaving aside the significance of his visit, or his finding things "just as in Japan," and of his suggestion of racial conflict, I offer this as a sample of the sort of influence the Japanese newspapers published in the Islands have on the entire Japanese population. These newspaper rank along with the Buddhist priests, the language school teachers and the consular body as agencies of Japan in maintaining the empire's authority over its "subjects" in Hawaii, both Japan-born and Hawaiian-born.

In the plantation camps, where live 23,000 employes of the sugar companies, and priests, teachers and others not employes, and children enough to increase the total possibly to 40,000, no copy of an American newspaper is ever seen. Those who can read with facility scan the Japanese newspapers and read them aloud to the others. Parenthetically, the Mfs in these camps is in every way the life of Japan.

American Papers Have Few Japanese Readers

Of course, in Honolulu and in Hilo a few doctors, contractors, priests, ministers and merchants who advertise in them subscribe for the American newspapers, of which there are two in each city. The Advertiser of Honolulu has about 250 such subscribers, the Star-Bulletin possibly a few more. It is certain that all of these subscribers also read the Japanese newspapers. House servants often read a bit now and then from the American newspapers in the house, but at home, squatting on the mat, they read the Japanese newspapers.

The two American newspapers of Honolulu are read by the whites—Americans, British, Portuguese, Germans—and by Hawaiians, part-Hawaiians, and to considerable extent by the Chinese and Filipinos. The Star-Bulletin had in December a circulation of 8,569 and the Advertiser 5,726. Here are the circulation figures of the Japanese dailies of Honolulu: Nippu Jiji, 6,858; Hochi, 5,312; Shimpo, 4,345; Cheho, 3,636; total 20,371.

In addition, various Japanese weeklies and other periodicals are published in Honolulu and a considerable number of periodicals come from Japan.

Four dailies are published in Hilo entirely with Japanese topics, treated from the Japanese national point of view—Tokio dispatches, news of the Japanese liners local Buddhist items, news of wrestling tournaments in Japan.

Z. Yamamoto, a London banker, en route to Japan on a Japanese boat, was interviewed by the Nippu Jiji and this interview printed on the English page. Yamamoto stated that everywhere in his travels in Europe people asked him, "When is Japan going to fight America?" He did not declare that war was unthinkable. He said nothing on that point at all, and went on to declare: "Great Britain, France and Germany are at present cherishing a very antagonistic feeling against the United States, among which circle Britain's is the most intense. Great Britain is extremely unfriendly feeling towards the United States, but on the other hand the British people that they do not express this feeling."

To Be Continued.

Japs Cling to Divinity of Ruler

"The divine ancestry of the Emperor, placing him infinitely above all other rulers, the great destiny of Japan, the prowess of her army and navy, justification of Japan's course in Korea, Shantung, Manchuria, Siberia and Saghalien, demand for 'racial equality' with the right of free immigration to all lands—these things are constantly fed into the minds of the Japanese of the islands."—From Joseph Timmons' expose.

Woman Work Harder Than Men

Very interesting experiments have just been completed by United States government experts which prove that the average woman is a far more intensive worker than the average man. In connection with these tests, the ratio of effort has been worked out between "horse-power," "man-power" and "woman-power." Details and illustrations of these illuminating experiments will be found in next Sunday's Boston Advertiser.

500 JAPANESE DRIVEN FROM AUSTRALIA

Unwelcome Colonists Put Aboard British Cruiser and Dumped on Own Shores

San Francisco, March 31.—Summary deportation from Australia of an entire colony of 500 Japanese, who were loaded aboard a British cruiser and unceremoniously dumped on the shores of Japan, is the latest step in Australia's battle against the encroachments of undesirable aliens.

Captain T. H. Hill, master of the British steamer Walmarino, who has just arrived here, gave details of the affair.

It occurred at Anson Bay, in Northern Australia. Here a group of 500 Japanese had settled not far from the white population, and were establishing themselves in the fishing and pearl industries.

After repeated protests by the white residents against the Japanese encroachments a British cruiser was dispatched to Anson Bay. A considerable force of marines was landed and quickly surrounded the entire district.

Within a few hours of the night the Japanese colony was pulled up root and branch. The entire population was herded to the wharves and taken aboard the cruiser in small boats, then the cruiser promptly steamed out of the harbor. It proceeded to a spot on the Japanese coast the precise location of which is unknown. Here it landed the Japanese and left them to be cared for by their own government.

JAMAICA PLAIN MAN SLAIN IN MEXICO

Tampico Policeman Shoots John C. Quinn; Bandits Kill Two Other Americans

Washington, March 31. — Three American citizens have been killed in Mexico, according to advices reaching the State Department.

They are: Edward Davis of Arizona; John C. Quinn of Jamaica Plain, Mass.; A. D. Bridges of Galveston, Tex.

The body of Davis was found stripped and robbed at Matochin, near Guaymas.

Quinn was a member of the crew of the American schooner Thomas L. Ward. He was shot and killed by a Tampico policeman, who intervened in an altercation between Quinn and other members of the crew. He was buried in the local cemetery at Tampico.

Bridges, who was a negro, was caretaker on a plantation known as Kilometer 100, in the State of Vera Cruz. He was attacked and killed by four bandits.

The State Department announced that representations have been made to the Mexican government in all these cases through the American embassy at Mexico.

Quinn was killed on February 9, the other two this month.

Quinn's Sister Was Irish Picket at White House

John C. Quinn, reported killed in Mexico, when at home, resided with his mother, Mrs. Mary Quinn, No. 5 Boynton street, Jamaica Plain. He was thirty-eight years old, and was a native of Galway, a son of the late Captain Thomas Quinn. Besides his mother, he is survived by a brother, Joseph, and two sisters, Miss Maura Quinn and Mrs. Kathleen McDonald.

Miss Quinn was one of the pickets stationed near the White House in Washington to aid the cause of Ireland.

Mrs. Quinn was informed of her son's death through a message from the U. S. consul at Tampico.

NO REASON FOR SUGAR ADVANCE SAYS DE FORD

Price of Labor in Cuba Down to $2.50 a Day, Asserts Boston Merchant

New York, March 31.—That there is no reason for sugar to advance in price and that the American public will resent any attempt to create a factitious value, was stated by Henry de Ford, president of the Carribean Sugar Company, who arrived from Cuba on the Munson liner Munamar from Antilla, Cuba.

Mr. De Ford, whose home is in Brookline, Mass., with an office in Boston, was accompanied by his daughter Alice.

"Labor has gone down to $2.50 a day for sugar workers from a day wage of six to seven dollars," said Mr. De Ford, "and I was surprised at the thousands of acres of uncut sugar cane. The lack of money to finance the cutting, which came at the time that Cuba suffered a financial slump, and the frequent rains are the cause of the cane remaining in the fields.

"For this season I believe that the crop will be a million tons short of the 3,500,000 tons, which placed it at 4,000,000 tons.

"Despite all this, there should be no higher price for sugar than at present and the price is sufficient to bring back a good return on money invested."

Secret "I Goes" Spy on Sinn Fein

Dublin, March 31.—A mysterious new body known as the "I Goes," has been formed by the British government to operate in Ireland. They are detailed on jobs on which the Black and Tans and the secret service failed.

The members of the new organization are highly paid specialists who move in Republican circles in the guise of Sinn Feiners "on the run."

Dublin Castle so closely guards the secret that even the paymaster is unaware of the names of the men.

HAVERHILL TAXI DRIVER SUES FOR FALSE ARREST

Lawrence, March 31.—Claiming that he was falsely arrested in connection with thefts from Summer cottages at Salisbury Beach, Arthur Martin, of Haverhill, brought suit in Superior civil court here against Ralph C. Wood of Haverhill. The plaintiff alleges that in district court in Amesbury the complaint against him was heard and he was found not guilty. Martin claims that his business as a taxi driver was impaired by the arrest.

DEADLOCK STILL ON IN STRIKE OF BUILDERS

Both Sides Awaiting Action by Gov. Cox; Unions to Debate Arbitration

Both sides are marking time in the building trades' strike pending action by Governor Channing H. Cox, who it is understood, is awaiting the report of the United Building Trades Council to the State board regarding the result of their meeting to be held tonight.

At this meeting action will be taken on the proposal that the men return to work Monday at the rate of ninety cents an hour, pending arbitration.

E. A. Johnson, secretary of the council, declares that before arbitration can now be considered by the council the trades must have an opportunity to meet their respective employers in the hope of learning the differences that exist, and then work out with the employers' association for arbitration for unadjusted grievances.

NICHOLS BEGINS WORK AS TECH HEAD JULY 1

Former Dartmouth President Chosen Successor to Late Dr. Richard C. Maclaurin

Dr. Ernest Fox Nichols, newly elected head of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, to succeed the late Dr. Richard C. Maclaurin, expects to assume his duties at the institution across the Charles on July 1.

No date has yet been set for the inauguration ceremonies.

Dr. Nichols, from 1909 to 1916, was president of Dartmouth College, and resigned to become professor of physics at Yale, which position he held until 1920, although engaged in war research work meanwhile.

He was born in Leavenworth, Kan., fifty-two years ago, and received his early education in the West.

He was graduated from the Kansas Agricultural College at the age of fifteen.

He received from Cornell the degree of master of science in 1893, and of doctor of science in 1897. In 1892 he was appointed to the chair of physics and astronomy at Colgate University, where he remained for six years.

Dr. Nichols has been director of physical science at the Nela Park research laboratory of the National Electric Lamp Association at Cleveland for the last year.

THEATRE INTERESTS SEEK WIDER WALK

The street commissioners were asked to take without waivers one-third of a strip fronting between Ordway place and Harvard place for sidewalk widening purposes at a resumed hearing by Samuel Spring, attorney for theatre interests, who propose to erect an eleven-story office building and theatre between Schoon and Bromfield streets on Washington street. The commissioners announced that they would take the matter under advisement. Representative Allow protested the plan in behalf of A. W. Cray and other merchants whose twenty-year leases on adjacent property still have nine years to run.

ASK TO CUT PAY OF 26,000 RAIL EMPLOYES

New York Central Road Files Petition at Chicago With Labor Board

Chicago, March 31.—What is considered in railroad circles as the first action brought by a carrier to cut payrolls, took place here, when the New York Central Railroad petitioned the Railroad Labor Board for the provisional reduction of the wages of approximately 26,000 unskilled workmen, to be effective April 1.

The request is made pending a hearing later on permanent reductions. Conferences with other classes of labor are being held this week and a slash in the pay of every type of railroad employe is being considered.

ARBITERS HEAR GRIEVANCES OF PRINTERS

Unions Present Reasons for Calling of Strike in All Shops Next Monday

The State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration today heard the side of the union employes of the printing trades crafts in the shops of the Boston Typothetae, relative to the strike which they have decided to begin next Monday. The arbitration board invited the union to present its case, hoping to later hear from the employers and perhaps prevent a walkout.

The grievances of the employes were presented to the board by Sylvester J. McBride, president of the Boston Typographical Union, No. 13; J. Frank O'Hare, representing the Daniel J. McDonald, secretary of the Allied Printing Trades Council of Boston, took exceptions to a statement from Edgar E. Nelson, secretary of the local Typothetae, that the forty-four-hour week was the issue at present.

"The issue," Secretary McDonald declared, "is not the forty-four-hour week, but the arbitrary action of the employers in posting notices in the shops of a reduction in wages that they intend to force, beginning April 1, without even serving a notification to this effect on the representatives of the unions involved, although heretofore these were matters for discussion, conference or negotiations.

TAKE BEECHAM'S PILLS FOR CONSTIPATION

Worn-out at 60— Strength Restored by Gland Pills

In Bed Five Months—Now Able to Fire Two Tons of Coal a Day

Evan S. Kilgore, of 108 Front St., Worcester, Mass., after being left in a practically helpless condition for five months following a shock, says that today at 60 years of age, he is as strong and well as ever, thanks to animal gland extracts.

This is but one of the many startling instances of how strength was restored through this latest product of Science which brought the aged parent miracles that it is accomplishing is creating wide interest everywhere.

When interviewed, Mr. Kilgore said: "After my shock, none of my friends expected me to live. I seemed to have suddenly grown 20 years older. My strength left me completely, my appetite deserted me, my nerves were shattered to pieces, and I was losing weight every day.

"Sleep was almost out of the question. I would have to get up four and five times every night. My memory became poor, I couldn't concentrate for any length of time. I had frequent headaches. I lost all desire for pleasure or work—in short I had become an old man.

"Then about a month ago I read in the papers of the remarkable results that were being brought about by the new animal gland extract treatment as embodied in Glandex Compound. To tell the truth I was a little skeptical. But I finally decided to give it a try.

Astonished by Results

"That day I will always consider to be one of the luckiest in all my life. Even after the second or third day's treatment I could notice an almost magical change in my condition. My appetite suddenly picked up, and before I knew it I was regaining my lost strength. Each day showed a splendid improvement in me.

"My nerves became calm and steady again. Now I can sleep like a log, very rarely have to get up at night, and I can feel myself getting stronger and stronger every day. On my job I shovel two tons of coal a day and don't mind it a bit. I'd say that's pretty good for a man my age, wouldn't you?

"Yes, sir, Glandex Compound is a remarkable preparation. It has done me worlds of good and I can't say enough for it. May it help others as it has helped me."

Amazing Results Everywhere

From every part of the country reports of the almost incredible results that are brought about through the use of Glandex Compound, especially in the treatment of people in the age groups pictured, are coming in. Many of the glands become run-down as they frequently do through overwork or excesses, this building up process takes down and we soon suffer with the numerous symptoms of run-down conditions.

Therefore, to build up run-down glands, scientists set out to find itself and use extracts from the glands of healthy and vigorous young animals. This principle is not in itself new—pepsin, which comes from the digestive organs of animals, has been used for years as an aid to human digestion. But the glandular extracts now being taken from the glands of healthy sheep and cattle, combined with iron and other health builders and is guaranteed by its manufacturers to bring results that are entirely satisfactory or its purchase price will be refunded.

Get a bottle today. You will be surprised at how quickly this new kind of tonic acts.

Get Rid of Your Fat

Thousands of others have gotten rid of theirs without dieting or exercising, often at the rate of over a pound a day, and without payment until reduction has taken place.

I am a licensed practising physician and personally prescribe the treatment for each individual case, thus enabling me to choose remedies that will produce not only a loss of weight harmlessly, but which will also relieve you of all the troublesome symptoms of overstoutness such as shortness of breath, palpitation, indigestion, rheumatism, gout asthma, kidney trouble and various other afflictions which often accompany overstoutness.

My treatment will relieve that depressed, tired, sleepy feeling, giving you renewed energy and vigor, a result of the loss of your superfluous fat.

You are not required to change in the slightest from your regular mode of living, for it is not a dieting or exercising. It is simple, easy and pleasant to take.

If you are overstout do not postpone but sit down right now and send for my free trial treatment and my plan whereby I am to be paid only after reduction has taken place if you so desire.

Physician Explains Who Should Take Nuxated Iron

Practical Advice on How To Help Build Up Great Strength, Energy and Endurance

"Lack of iron in the blood not only makes a man a physical and mental weakling, but also irritable, easily fatigued, but it utterly robs him of that vital force, that stamina and strength of will which are the foundation stones of power to enjoy walk of life," says Dr. Almer Pierce Norton, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital Outdoor Department and the Westchester County Jail Hospital. "I may also transform a beautiful, well-complexioned woman into one as cross, nervous and irritable. I have specially prescribed organic iron for scores of physicians making blood examinations of their weak, anaemic, run-down patients. Thousands of persons go on year after year suffering from physical weakness and a highly nervous condition due to lack of sufficient iron in their red blood corpuscles without ever realizing the real cause of their trouble. Without iron in your blood your food merely passes through the body unutilized, like coal through an ash pit with rollers so wide apart that the ash can't grind.

"Any man or woman who is an old rag, a bundle of nerves, pent-up energy, nervous irritable, and all run down, while at 50 or 60 with plenty of iron in your blood you may still be young in the head, active in body, and brimming over with vim and energy.

"Be sure that you get iron in organic iron—Nuxated Iron—and not metallic iron as most people are taking. Organic iron is the iron in your blood cells that carries the oxygein from the lungs to the tissues and arteries, while metallic iron is iron just as you find it in pieces of iron filings, and is not at all assimilable. I prescribe organic Nuxated Iron. Nuxated Iron represents the organic iron of nature's vegetables and is the form that one dose is estimated to be equivalent to the organic iron in enough fresh lettuce to eating one-half quart of fresh spinach, or from eight to ten eggs, or half a dozen baked apples. It is like taking extracts of the strength contained in pounds of meat.

"Over 4,000,000 people annually are using Nuxated Iron. It quickly helps make rich red blood, revitalizes overtaxed exhausted nerves and gives increased strength and energy. You cannot well be regarded as the manufacturers of it does not produce astonishing results.

ALL $5,000 TEST TITLES ARE IN DAILY LIST

Entrants Again Reminded That Rules Governing Trial Should Be Carefully Read

Participants in the $5,000 Movie-Play Title Test are once more respectfully reminded that in the List of Titles printed today is the correct title of today's Test Picture.

This rule may be accepted as the fact EVERY day, that somewhere in the List of Titles printed with the Test Picture is the correct title of that picture.

Five correspondents write to tell of the confusion they were in on Sunday and Monday.

"Where were the titles of Pictures Nos. 29 and 30?" they inquire.

SOMEWHERE IN LIST.

The answer is that they were SOMEWHERE in the long list of titles printed on Sunday and Monday.

The printing of a total of thirty pictures on those two days made heavy demands upon space. The correct title of each of the thirty pictures was printed. Naturally, they were not all in one "group." There was one attempt to classify by "weeks." You were told—and it was true—that the correct titles of all the pictures printed would be found in the list printed with them.

It will be best from now on to look for "today's" picture — this will be true every day—in "today's" list.

The list of Titles printed today made its first appearance yesterday. In all probability it will remain standing until next Monday, when another list will take its place. In the list which appears next Monday, some of these titles may be used again BUT IT WILL REMAIN TRUE THAT EVERY TIME YOU SEE A NEW PICTURE THE CORRECT TITLE OF THAT PICTURE WILL BE IN THE LIST.

NO GROUPING TRIED.

"In what group," on Sunday and Monday, were the titles of Nos. 29 and 30?

There was no attempt at "grouping." Somewhere in the Long List were the titles of Nos. 29 and 30. Somewhere in today's long list is the correct title of No. 33

The Test has reached its "most difficult" stage. It has yet to reach its "most difficult" period. Those who would like all the pictures as "easy" as Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 will be disappointing out. Folks who know what they are about, and who realize the actual fact that this is a TEST, will stick.

Some dropped out under somewhat similar circumstances in the $5,000 Movie Player Identity Test. Many remained—and 219 of them are about to share in the award. The work of the checkers in that Test will be completed today or tomorrow. The high mark appears to be 102 correct identifications out of a possible 120.

What pleases the Test Editor most is that each of the 120 pictures WAS correctly identified. Yes, indeed, every one was identified correctly. NO participant had them ALL right—but in the record mark up to date that the Test Editor was right when he said that every picture in the Test COULD be identified.

Want to know a little more about the Plays in the Test? THE PRESENT TOP NUMBER OF 102 CORRECT IDENTIFICATIONS WAS MADE BY A GIRL OF THE GIRLS! We do not know at this writing whether she is fourteen or forty; maid, wife or widow.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

J. A. P., Newburyport:—The fifth paragraph of the rules answers your question.

"Thick," Worcester:—The reply to Lewiston did not concern you even remotely.

"Nutty":—Use the smaller No. 23, instead.

Morris Kaplan and Esther Smith:—Letters addressed to you at the addresses given have been returned by the Postoffice Department. Please have a heart!

J. B., Springfield:—Whether it should have been "In Pursuit of Polly" or "Pursuit of Polly," doesn't matter. There has been no picture to call for either title; nor will there be. Only one picture of the other was a misprint, but no fair as the Test is concerned, neither is important. Forget 'em.

U. S. WARRANT ISSUED FOR LYNAM

Department of Justice Indicates Belief Missing Ensign Still in U. S.

A Federal warrant for the arrest of Ensign Joseph J. Lynam, missing paymaster of the U. S. Chester, has just been issued to Agent Mathew L. Magrath of the Department of Justice who, alleges that Lynam embezzled $25,000 of the government's money and property.

Lynam, whose home is in Newport, R. I., is charged with stealing and converting to his own use the $25,000 which was to be used in paying off the members of the crew of the U. S. S. Chester. The alleged embezzlement occurred at the Charlestown navy yard about March 24.

It was originally believed that Lynam was on his way to South America, but the fact that the federal warrant does not state that he is a fugitive from the United States leaves reason to believe that he is in all probability within this federal jurisdiction.

200 American Bodies Found in Argonne

By Universal Service.

Paris, March 31.—Nearly two hundred bodies of American soldiers have been discovered, more than two years after the armistice, hidden in recesses of the Argonne Forest.

The American Graves Registration Office has been able to identify 128 of the bodies, but the remainder are so decayed or mutilated that identification is likely to prove an impossibility.

ROPE TEARS OFF TWO OF FISHERMAN'S FINGERS

Gloucester, March 31.—Albert Hudder, one of the crew of the schooner Catherine Burke, while engaged in hoisting the mainsail of the vessel as she was under way for the fishing grounds, was painfully injured by becoming entangled in the running sheet, his hand catching in the bite of the rope, tearing that member so badly that two fingers were amputated at the Addison Gilbert Hospital.

OFFICIAL MEASUREMENTS OF MAYFLOWER MADE

Gloucester, March 31.—The official measurements of the new schooner have been completed by Inspectors Maurice F. Daley and H. A. Hay of the local customs service. The craft measures 144.01 feet gross and 125.34 tons net. The Mayflower is 131.6 feet long, 25.8 in breadth and 12 feet in depth.

NON-PAR STOCK BILL OF LIGHT FIRMS KILLED

Second Major Scheme of Corporations Meets Fate of $30,000,000 Premiums Measure

Having rejected the $30,000,000 capitalization-of-premiums bill by the overwhelming majority of 125 to 23, the House of Representatives followed its hand by defeating the second major scheme of the combined gas and electric corporations—the bill to allow the issue of stock without par value.

The bill was rejected by unanimous vote of the House.

Representative Henry L. Shattuck of Boston who, with Speaker Hedlund Loring Young, was largely responsible for the upset of the grab campaign of the powerful gas-electric combine, made a single sentence speech which resulted in the rejection of the non-par stock bill.

SHELLS STUDY BILL FIRST.

When it was reached in the order of the business he informed the House that this measure was part and parcel of the program involved in the premiums bill, which the House had rejected after it had been characterized as vicious, a monstrosity conceived in the greed of the corporations and certain to take additional money out of the pockets of the consumers.

He called to the House's attention its decision to send the entire matter to the State Department of Public Utilities and said that this bill, too, should not pass without a comprehensive study.

ADOPT MOTION.

The House then voted unanimously and without further opposition to reject the non-par bill.

When the third bill in the scheme of the lighting interests was reached, Shattuck moved that the House strike out all those provisions which would enable electric and hydro-electric corporations to issue bonds up to double the amount of their capital stock. The House adopted this motion.

As a result of these decisions, the elaborate program of the combined corporations has been rejected.

WINTHROP LABORERS' PAY CUT 50 CENTS A DAY

Winthrop's town laborers have been notified by Superintendent of Streets Fred Tewksbury that the Board of Selectmen had voted to reduce their pay 50 cents a day. The new wage schedule went into effect yesterday. The men will now receive $4 a day instead of $4.50.

At the beginning of the World War the laborers were receiving $3.50.

PUT STOMACH IN FINE CONDITION

Says Indigestion Results from an Excess of Hydrochloric Acid

Undigested food delayed in the stomach decays, or rather, ferments the same as food left in the open air, says a noted authority. He also tells us that indigestion is caused by Hyper-acidity (meaning, there is an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach which prevents complete digestion and starts food fermentation. Thus everything eaten sours in the stomach much like garbage sours in a can, forming acrid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. Then we feel a heavy, lumpy misery in the chest, we belch up gas, we eructate sour food or have heartburn, flatulence, water-brash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead, get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and drink while it is effervescing and furthermore, to continue this for a week. While relief follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble with excellent results.—Advertisement.

WESTFIELD MOULDERS IN PAY NEGOTIATIONS

Westfield, March 31.—Negotiations have been started by the H. B. Smith Company, the largest employer of labor here, and the moulders' union, towards effecting a new wage schedule. The moulders now receive $7.20 per day. Reports have been current that rather than continue this wage agreement the company would close down its plant. Officials of the plant, however, have denied this report. The existing agreement expires April 15.

Do This For Constipation

THE public should know that there is a vast difference in the action of the various remedies for constipation. Some are "Tonics," purges, physics. They gripe and weaken.

For lasting effect use a laxative. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin acts gently and mildly so that even a tiny baby can use it with safety. It is a compound of Egyptian Senna and other simple laxative herbs with pepsin and pleasant-tasting aromatics. A sixty-cent bottle will last an average family many months.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the most popular of all laxatives and more is used in American homes than any other. Last year eight million bottles were sold by druggists, the largest sale in the world.

TELLS DYSPEPTICS WHAT TO EAT

Avoid Indigestion, Sour Acid Stomach, Heartburn, Gas on Stomach, Etc.

Indigestion and practically all forms of stomach trouble, say medical authorities, are due nine times out of ten to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach. Chronic acid stomach is an exceedingly dangerous condition and sufferers should at either one of two things.

Either they can go on a limited and often disagreeable diet, avoiding foods that disagree with them, that irritate the stomach and lead to excess acid secretion or they can eat as they please in reason and make it a practice to counteract the effect of the harmful acid and prevent the formation of gas, sourness or premature fermentation by the use of a little Bisurated Magnesia at their meals.

There is probably no better, safer or more reliable stomach antacid than Bisurated Magnesia, and it is widely used for this purpose. It has no direct action on the stomach and is not a digestive. But a dessertspoonful of the powder or a couple of five-grain tablets taken in a little water with the food will neutralize the excess acidity which may be present and prevent further formation. This removes the whole source of the trouble and the meal digests naturally and healthfully without need of pepsin pills or artificial digestents.

Get a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia from any reliable druggist. Ask for either powder or tablets. It never comes as a liquid, milk or citrate, and is the blended form as used in hospitals. Try this plan and eat what you want at your next meal and see if this isn't the best advice you ever had on "what to eat."—Advertisement.

ON THE SCREEN

By FRIEDA DAVIS.

ONE OF THE greatest sets since the days of Griffith's "Intolerance" has been opened up for filming and for the public. In Universal's "Foolish Wives" much of the action takes place in Monte Carlo. Taking the entire company overseas to that French resort was quite out of the question, therefore it was a case of bringing Monte Carlo to the company.

Accordingly, a set was put up which duplicates exactly the main part of the town, that is, the famous Casino and the Hotel Paris. There was nothing "faked" for this picture. The buildings have been substantially put up and have been copied with the greatest care.

On the day when the "shooting" of the film was done into Monte Carlo, Jr., was thrown open to the public, who swarmed in in hordes. The black diffidence, however, as one of them expressed it, "can't get a thrill out of seeing movies taken," and they left the set with as much enthusiasm as the less sophisticated Easterners. These people served as "atmosphere" during their wanderings and appeared in several scenes.

In order to be heard throughout the set in giving his directions, the director made use of a huge "voice magnifier," which was located directly before him. Though his his voice was carried clearly to each corner of the open square, Cecil De Mille made use of an instrument of this sort when he directed the big battle scenes in "Joan the Woman," in which Geraldine Farrar starred some time ago.

THE FANNY DeMILLE

AN amusing story is told of DeMille's directing through this instrument. It was one of the fighting scenes the "extras" were scattered all over the field of battle, preparing for a skirmish.

DeMille on his platform built high in the air was overseeing the last details of this scene. Suddenly he noticed an extra at one side of the field who was correct in every detail of costuming, steel helmet, armor and all, but who was acting more like a Yankee doughboy than a French knight.

He picked up his instrument and whispered softly; 500 yards away the "knight" jumped as if he were shot, as the voice spoke to him out of the air.

"Mr. DeMille's compliments to Mr. ——— and he will be pleased to remember that cigarettes weren't invented in the time he is supposed to be fighting."

ANOTHER CHANGE

WHEN a foreign film comes over here for a showing, one of the first things done to it is to change its name.

When they changed the title of "Madame DuBarry" to "Passion," there was a reason. Several years ago Theda Bara appeared in a film version of this story and used that title. But what reason can they give for retitling "Anne Boleyn," which gives a logical idea of the play and something definite to go on, to "Deception"?

SWEDEN'S MARY PICKFORD HERE

SIGRID HELMQUIST, called "the Mary Pickford of Sweden," is in this country making a picture for the Cosmopolitan, "Just Around the Corner."

She has been here three months, but hasn't caught her breath yet, according to her conversation the other day. "Everything is done so much more slowly and deliberately at home," she said. "Here you rush through everything so fast. It would take us a year to make a film that in America you make in one month.

"I like it, though," she admitted. "This—this, what is it? Yes, yes, 'pep.' That is great. I expect that when I go back to Sweden no one will be able to keep up with me. Meanwhile, I must say that I would prefer it a little less at a time, this hurry. But then, it is very American."

DU PONT'S VIDOR PRODUCTIONS.

KING VIDOR thoroughly believes in the foreign ideas on production. Therefore he went directly to headquarters, in this case foreign parts, to get his directors. He has signed up L. B. Du Pont and his son, Max Du Pont, as art director and director of photography to make his future Vidor features.

L. B. Du Pont is a pupil of the famous Harpignes and an officer of the National Academy of France. He is one of the foremost landscape painters of that country and his canvases have been exhibited in the Salon of Paris, a great honor for an artist.

His son, Max, won the distinction a short time ago by winning the first prize for landscape photography in the Colonial Art Exhibit, his subject being one which has held attractions for several of France's best known artists, "The Marge of Lake Vahiria, Tahiti," in the Marquesas Islands of the South Seas. The Du Ponts are already at Vidor Village, near Hollywood, sorting out their pictures.

ANNA Q. NILSSON has just returned from Florida, where she has been taking exterior scenes for John Berrymore's first picture, "The Lotus Eater."

MONTAGUE LOVE has shown his love for the spoken drama with a vengeance. He has installed in "The Survival of the Fittest," which opened in New York a short time ago, but has suddenly made a jump into another legitimate production, "The Prince Man," which will open on Broadway soon.

ANTHONY HOPE'S colorful novel, "The Prisoner of Zenda," will at last be filmed. Rex Ingram wants to do it and will start filming in the near future.

RUPERT HUGHES is going into scenario writing on a large scale. His next story, "The Old Nest," calls for seventy-one characters, and all of them important. The cast needed for this piece is very nearly an all-star one. It includes Mary Alden, Helene Chadwick, Constance Binney, Louise Lovely, Cullen Landis, Molly Malone, "Lefty" Flynn, Nick Cogley and John Bowers.

ALL DRUGGISTS CAN DRAW OUT WHISKEY

Retailers Allowed to Get Supplies to Meet "Reasonable Demands"

By International News Service.

Washington, March 31.—Wine and whiskey for the sick can now be withdrawn by retail druggists from bonded warehouses to meet all reasonable demands.

Orders were issued by Revenue Commissioner Williams today authorizing druggists beginning tomorrow to withdraw in such amounts as are needed to meet their requirements.

The new instructions modify an order issued January 25 limiting withdrawals by druggists to five cases of liquor on a single withdrawal.

Druggists will be permitted to withdraw up to 100 gallons of whiskey and 100 gallons of wine every three months. They will be allowed to withdraw in larger amounts, Commissioner Williams directed, by filing satisfactory proof with the prohibition directors in their districts that larger quantities are necessary to meet their trade demands.

Commissioner Williams' order affecting withdrawals of wine is the first step taken by the Internal Revenue Bureau to "liberalize" the "dry" regulations since the opinion of former Attorney-General Palmer was issued, giving the interpretation officially in the status of whiskey for medicinal purposes.

Removal of the restrictions as to wine, as well as whiskey, was decided upon as a result of demand from all parts of the country for more liberal and wholesale druggists for early relaxation of the rules previously in force to meet heavy demand from the public. Since Palmer's opinion the druggists have been literally swamped with appeals to supply wine, beer and whiskey upon physicians' prescriptions, officials declared.

GERMAN 'REDS' RESUME FIGHT IN RHINELAND

Employers Issue Ultimatum to Labor to Resume Work by Midnight

Berlin, March 31.—Fresh clashes between Communists and German Security police were reported from the great Rhineland industrial belt today. The employers throughout all Germany have issued an ultimatum to the workers to return to work before midnight tonight; otherwise they will be dismissed.

The Reds attempted to blow up the Oranniesi bridge in this city but the attempt was frustrated.

A band of heavily armed Reds attacked the industrial town of Geisenkirchen, in Westphalia, but were driven off and retreated in the direction of Essen. Geisenkirchen was defenced by Security police.

Four hundred Communist prisoners were captured by the Security police in a battle at Remscheid. The casualties were not announced.

At Bremen a mob of 25,000 Reds attempted to storm the shipyards and force a general strike.

Fires broke out in the shipping plants, but were extinguished.

The number of Red prisoners captured by the Security police in all quarters of Germany now total nearly 3,000. The damage will extend into hundreds of millions of marks.

One Office at Least That Seeks the Man

Washington, March 31.—There is one $5,000-a-year job under the new Republican administration that is seeking the man.

Postmaster-General Hays said today he had asked the railroad presidents and officials of large commercial concerns to help him find the right man for Second Assistant Postmaster-General in charge of the parcel post, aerial mail service and general mail traffic. Hays hopes to persuade "the best traffic man in the country" to accept the position.

Robert Ashton of Evanston, Ill., president of the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad, and formerly in charge of food distribution during the war, is said to be under consideration.

Otto Praeger, Second Assistant under Postmaster-General Burleson today tendered his resignation to Mr. Hays, effective Friday.

$10,000 AWARD FOR DEATH OF SON

Lawrence, March 31.—A verdict of $10,000 was returned in favor of the plaintiff in the case of Victor Theroux, against Charles N. Kilcourse in Superior Civil Court here. The automobile belonging to Kilcourse is alleged to have struck Childe Theroux, son of the plaintiff, on South Broadway in August, 1918. The boy died as a result of the accident.

BRITAIN FACES NEW LABOR WARFARE

National Coal Mine Strike Effective Tomorrow Night, Seems Inevitable

London, March 31.—Great Britain is on the eve of a new labor war. A national coal strike, effective tomorrow night, seemed inevitable today. The press warned the public that a general walk-out by miners appeared to be unavoidable.

The executive committee of the Federation of Miners held a meeting today, but no statement was issued. Later the committeemen went to Unity House to confer with representatives of the other two branches of the Triple Alliance—the railway men and the transport workers.

The mines, which have been operated under government control and government subsidy since the war, are to be turned back to the private owners gradually. Anticipating this action the mine owners announced wage reductions. The miners refused to accept the wage cuts and threatened to strike if they were put into effect.

DESTROYERS ELLIS AND HALE REACH NEWPORT

Newport, R. I., March 31.—The Ellis and the Hale of the destroyer squadron fleet, that is to have its base in Narragansett Bay this Summer, have arrived here. The two destroyers brought with them 209 men to enter the "seamen-gunners' school at the naval torpedo station.

WAY FOUND TO OUST HOLDOVER POSTMASTERS

Hays Would Place Executive Ability on Equality With Civil Service Test

Washington, March 31.—President Harding will issue an executive order within a few days that will make it possible for the new Republican administration to replace many Democratic postmasters throughout the country. It was indicated at the Post-office Department.

Postmaster-General Hays has made recommendations to the President, urging that executive ability and the ability to handle a large number of employes be considered one of the most important qualifications for postmasters, and that this ability receive at least an equal rating with the rating won in a competitive clerical examination in determining the selection of postmasters from the three highest in a Civil Service examination.

DIVORCE SCANDAL DRIVING BANKER INTO EXILE

session of all his rights as son and heir of the banker.

STILLMAN SILENT.

The reports of Stillman's preparations for departure aroused conjecture as to the banker's future relations with the National City Bank, of which he is still president.

It was indicated, according to rumors, that the directors in refusing to accept Stillman's resignation last week may have been actuated by an understanding that he was soon to sail for Europe, when he could terminate his connection with the institution gracefully.

Stillman and his lawyers would make no comment on the reports today.

DAWN OF POVERTY.

"The new woman of mystery," who figures in the case, it was reported today, at one time lived in luxury in an apartment not far from Fifth avenue in "the fifties." She moved to Garden City, Long Island, only after society had been buzzing with stories about her and the banker.

It is further alleged that while this "mystery" woman was living on Long Island that Banker Stillman met Mrs. Florence Leeds. The star of luxury waned and poverty dawned—therein lies the explanation of the readiness of the "mystery" woman to testify in behalf of Mrs. Stillman.

Baby Guy Finds Aide in His Sister Anne

New York, March 31.—Anne Stillman, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Stillman, is prepared to face her father in open court to defend her mother.

This development in the far-reaching sensation brought to the front line of public attention one of the most interesting figures in the divorce suit.

At nineteen Anne Stillman possesses all the beauty that made her mother famous two decades ago—the beauty that was inherited from Mrs. James Brown Potter, the girl's grandmother, recollections of whose comet-like career were revived by the present case.

Miss Stillman's testimony is considered of pre-eminent importance because she was with her parents after the birth of Guy, the baby whose paternity is in dispute. James B. Hack, guardian ad litem for the infant, believes that Miss Stillman will testify that Guy is the son of her father and entitled to the same financial consideration as the other three children.

The fact that this testimony will mean a loss of about $1,000,000 to Miss Stillman will make it the more impressive, friends of Mrs. Stillman assert. James A. Stillman is custodian of a trust fund of $10,000,000, which will pass to his children at his death. If Guy's legitimacy is sustained, the fund will be divided into four parts. If the disputed child is declared illegitimate, the other children will divide the $2,500,000 that otherwise would go to him.

Miss Stillman sought to effect a reconciliation between her parents last year. She went to Southampton, England, preparing to tour Europe with a party of girls when her parents separated. An urgent cablegram recalled the girl. She had scarcely landed from the steamer, but she hurried back and spent months in vain seeking to cement the domestic breach. When news of the divorce became public, Miss Stillman was completing her education in an exclusive school in Massachusetts. She returned to New York and now lives in an apartment at No. 1910 Fifth avenue with Miss Muriel McCormick, of Chicago.

Judge to Announce Alimony Tomorrow

Poughkeepsie, March 31.—Supreme Court Justice Morschauser announced that he would file his decision on the application of Mrs. Anne U. Stillman for alimony and counsel fees on Friday.

Most important will be the justice's opinion as to the admissibility in evidence of the now famous letter that Mrs. Stillman wrote to her husband, the intercepted letters to her from Fred Beauvais, the alleged half-breed correspondent, and letters of Mr. Stillman to his wife.

The decision will be taken by special messenger to White Plains on Friday. There it will be delivered to Charles Decker, clerk of the court, for transmission to the county clerk of Putnam. It was in the hamlet of Carmel, inaccessible county seat of Putnam, the original papers in the strange case, "James A. Stillman vs. Annie U. Stillman and Guy Stillman" were filed last September as part of the plan to keep the tragic details of the action revealed a secret from the public. All papers ultimately must rest there.

Denies Guide Has Any Indian Blood

East Liverpool, O., March 31.—"Fred Beauvais's mother, my stepdaughter, was of Irish descent. His father is a French-Canadian. I am positive that Fred has not one single drop of Indian blood in his veins."

This was the unqualified declaration here today of Mrs. Mary Maloney, widow of James Maloney, a respected citizen of this city. He was the father of Mary Maloney, who wed Louis Beauvais, father of Fred.

Mrs. Maloney was questioned by the correspondent of the New York American after she had been discovered here through the aid of the Rev. J. A. De Tremblay, of Montreal. Through him it had been learned that the family of Fred Beauvais, named as the "Indian lover" of Mrs. Anne Stillhart Stillman, wife of James Stillman, New York banker, lived in East Liverpool.

BROTHER THERE, TOO.

In East Liverpool, besides Mrs. Maloney, lives a brother of Beauvais' mother, William Maloney; three nat-sisters and a half-brother, the issue of the second marriage of Beauvais' grandfather.

Mrs. Maloney was quick to resent any imputation that her stepdaughter's son had Indian blood in his veins. His mother, my stepdaughter, visited me last about ten years ago. She told us then that she had married a French Canadian named Louis Beauvais. She mentioned his nationality specifically, for naturally we were interested.

"She told us of her son and of various other things in her life in Canada—such things that, I am sure, if an investigation is carried on in Canada will show that no Indian connection can be found on the side of Fred's father. Of course, there is no possibility of Indian blood on her side, as she is of pure Irish-American descent. Fred himself has never visited me, but every time his mother writes she tells me of him."

TRACES ANCESTRY.

Then Mrs. Maloney, sitting in the cozy parlor of her little home on Garfield street, on the outskirts of the city, went into exhaustive details of the lineage of Beauvais on his mother's side.

James Maloney, with his first wife, originally lived in Cincinnati. Maloney himself was of Irish stock, while the first Mrs. Maloney was of Irish-American descent.

This couple had two children, Mary, later the mother of Fred Beauvais, and William, who lived here.

The Maloney family was disrupted when the first wife died in Cincinnati. The father placed his little daughter Mary in the keeping of a family named Sweney at Cincinnati and moved with his son to East Liverpool. There he married his present Mrs. Maloney, to whom was born three daughters and a son. All these children are living here today. Maloney himself was a dipper in a pottery works and died sixteen years ago.

MOTHER STILL LIVING.

Mary Maloney, after she had attained young womanhood, finally found her way into Canada, where, in a little Canadian town, she met Louis Beauvais, a French Canadian. Courtship and marriage follow-ed. Of the union Fred Beauvais, about whom the sensational tales of the Stillman divorce case have been formed, was born.

Mrs. Beauvais is still living and writes occasionally to her stepmother here. The Maloneys have lived in this city for thirty-two years.

MATERIAL COST AND LABOR BLAMED

Chamber Committee Reports on Causes of Housing Shortage

from the clay to the warehouse, lumber and brick respectively, like most building materials, have increased in price out of proportion to the raw material cost and the increase in freight rates."

Concerning the often-repeated charge that prices were arbitrarily "fixed" by dealers in building materials, the committee said:

"The material men who appeared before the committee denied that prices were controlled or fixed artificially. The builders and general contractors were either reluctant to throw any light on this aspect of the problem or testified that they had no information.

"Your committee, therefore, can make no definite finding of fact on this subject matter, and can simply indicate some of the facts that were established and let the directors draw such inferences as are fairly warranted therefrom.

DEALERS ORGANIZED.

"The material men and the dealers in building equipment in the city of Boston and in Massachusetts are organized for the most part into associations.

"The president of the largest masons' supply house in Boston testified concerning the Building Supply Dealers' Association of Greater Boston that the purpose of forming it was to remedy an unsatisfactory situation in the masons' material business, due to a failure on the part of many of the men to understand what it costs them to do business.

"The purpose of this association, as he said he was told, was to remedy the situation by having a uniform method of account and a knowledge of what it costs them to do business, methods of keeping their expense accounts properly. So they would not charge against their business the proper outgo."

"TIZ" FOR SORE, TIRED FEET--AH!

"Tiz" is grand for aching, swollen, tender, calloused feet or corns.

Ah! what relief. No more tired feet; no more burning feet; no more swollen, aching, tender, sweaty feet. No more soreness in corns, calluses, bunions.

No matter what ails your feet or what under the sun you've tried without getting relief, just use "Tiz." "Tiz" is the only remedy that draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up the feet. "Tiz" relieves your foot trouble so you'll never limp or draw up your face in pain. Your shoes won't seem tight and your feet will never, never hurt or get sore and swollen. Think of it, no more foot misery, no more agony from corns, callouses or bunions.

Get a box at any drug store or department store and get instant relief. Wear smaller shoes. Just once try "Tiz." Get a whole year's foot comfort for a few cents. Think of it.—Advertisement.

Fever Blisters Carry Sleeping Sickness

Paris, March 31.—Beware of that fever blister!

This is the slogan of Paris doctors following the discovery by Professor Roux of the Pasteur Institute that the virus contained in a fever blister is blood brother to the microbe of encephalitis lethargia or sleeping sickness.

Virus taken from a human fever blister was injected in the veins of a rabbit, who promptly died from encephalitis.

SALES TAX IS ADVOCATED BY VORENBERG

Tells Jewelers the Time Has Come to Spread Sunshine on Business Situation

Substitution of a sales tax for the present system of taxation and restoration of confidence in business were advocated by Felix Vorenberg, vice-president of Gilchrist Company and president of the retail trade board of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, speaking at the convention of the Massachusetts Retail Jewelers Association held at the Copley Plaza.

CHANGE DEMANDED.

"If you don't prefer to have a lawyer make out your tax bill and then swear to something you know nothing about," said Mr. Vorenberg, "then I would advise you to spend two cents and write a letter to your Congressman, asking him to vote for the sales tax in place of the existing excess profits taxes.

"The whole country is talking taxes, a change is demanded, but the contest for tax reforms cannot be won unless business men let their Congressmen know what they want. There are always objectors to everything."

Mr. Vorenberg said that the time has come for spreading sunshine instead of gloom on the business situation, and urged the several hundred delegates from all over Massachusetts and Rhode Island to carry home a word of cheer.

President Albert R. Kerr of the association said that his organization was doing all it could to bring about the sales tax.

STATE FOR ECONOMY.

Frank G. Allen, president of the State Senate, declared that the State administration was pledged to economy. He said that the budget presented to Governor Cox totalled $30,000,000; that Governor Cox cut $17,000,000 from it and the Ways and Means Committee pruned another $1,000,000.

As a result, Senator Allen said, the State tax should not be much larger, if any, than at present.

Thomas C. O'Brien, Commissioner of Public Institutions in Boston, greeted the visitors on behalf of Mayor Peters. Dr. Willard Scott of Brookline also spoke.

Amazon Belles Paint Gowns on Skin

By Universal Service.

New York, March 31.—The manikins of the Paris race courses who popularized the tattooed stocking, are amateurs as compared with the damsels of Pulmopan, at the head waters of the Amazon, according to Dr. Morton S. Dickey, who arrived from Brasil on the steamship Polycarp.

These tan skinned beauties wear only a string of beads, but beautiful gowns are painted on their skins, Dr. Dickey said. The inspiration for these works of art, he said, was probably in the colored fashion pages of Brazilian magazines.

SWASTIKA GIRLS' CLUB TO DANCE APRIL 2

The annual dance of the Swastika Girls' Club, composed of twenty young ladies of prominence in Dorchester Social Circles, will be held Saturday evening, April 2, at Whiton Hall, Dorchester. The glee Club, composed of members, has made plans for a concert during intermission, and two prominent local dancers are expected to exhibit. The committee in charge follows: Eveline Dion, Madeline Hennessy, Constance Johnson and Adelphine Dion. The patronesses are: Mrs. P. A. Dion, Mrs. J. B. Hennessey, Mrs. Thomas H. Love and Mrs. L. Johnson.

DRAFT MYSTERY IN 'PROFITS' CASE CLEARED

$75,000 Order Taken From Mrs. Brightwell by Police, McCarr Testifies

The mystery of a draft for $75,000 made by the Citizens' National Bank on a New York bank just before the collapse of the Old Colony Foreign Exchange Company, and which has been supposed to be in the possession of Mrs. Katherine W. Brightwell, wife of the president of the company, was cleared up at the trial now going on in the Superior Criminal Court.

It appeared that when Mrs. Brightwell was arrested and taken to police headquarters, the draft was found upon her and was turned over to Chief Inspector McCarr, who still has it.

Chief McCarr testified that he had received checks totalling nearly $70,000 from an attorney to whom they had been given by William Houchie, the auditor of the Old Colony Foreign Exchange Co. Two checks for $3,584 and $9,213.30, were made payable to Arthur H. O'Neil, one of the defendants, and were dated August 10, 1920. Another check for $7,500 bearing date of August 7 named Fred Meyers as payee.

McCarr also testified that Houchie told him that Brightwell had at different times taken money without giving any receipt for the same. The total was about $35,000.

Arthur Wiswell, a defendant, in testifying for the government, said that he became an agent of the company on the representation that it would be able to show profits. Arthur H. Irwin, another defendant, told of having been employed by the Old Colony Foreign Exchange Company.

Throw away your old mop and buy a MASCO today.

Every MASCO is trade marked, wrapped and labeled.

The MASCO MOP

is one hundred per cent better

MASCO PRODUCTS

WE have improved on the regulation floor mop by making the MASCO twice as absorbent and again as durable.

This makes the MASCO soak up water twice as fast as the mop you are acquainted with. This lets the MASCO do that clean-up job in half the usual time. It cleans easier. It cleans cleaner. It wrings out with half the effort. It dries two times quicker.

If you have passed up the mop as a clumsy unsatisfactory implement—if you now get down on your hands and knees to clean floors—buy a MASCO and do this work just as thoroughly with more comfort and ease.

There is a light, 8 ounce, short stringed MASCO made especially for housework. It gets into and cleans the hard-to-clean places. It fits women's hands. Its short strings do not swish and fling the water around.

The MASCO can also be had in other sizes up to big, generous 32 ounce mops for cleaning large floors, regular "he" mops.

Remember the name MASCO. Remember the triangle trademark. Remember every MASCO is wrapped and labeled just to make it easy for you to reorder and get the same quality when you need another.

The light, household size MASCO retails for 45c, the medium size for 60c and the large size for 75c.

The MASCO does the work in half the usual time.

For sale by grocers, housefurnishing and hardware dealers and department stores. If your dealer doesn't sell MASCO Mops he can get them quickly from the distributors named below.

Teeth Shine

When the film goes—watch and see

Learn now how teeth look—how they feel—when you combat the film.

Get from your druggist, without cost, this ten-day test. Note the instant results, then look in ten days.

Millions have already done this. Leading dentists everywhere advise it. Now show your home folks what clean teeth really mean.

The war on film

Dental science, the world over, is fighting a war on film. Film is that viscous coat you feel. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays. And most tooth troubles are now traced to it.

Those troubles have been constantly increasing. The ordinary tooth paste does not end film, so the tooth brush has proved inadequate. Millions know how well-brushed teeth have discolored and decayed.

It is the film-coat that discolors, not the teeth. Film is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. And, despite all brushing, few escape these troubles caused by film.

New ways to fight it

Now dental science has found ways to fight film, day by day. Able authorities have proved the methods efficient. Leading dentists everywhere now urge their application.

The methods are combined in a dentifrice called Pepsodent. To millions it has brought a new era in teeth cleaning. And to every home a ten-day test is offered free, so all may quickly know it.

Quick, visible results

Anyone can see and feel what Pepsodent is doing. No old method of brushing ever brought such effects. So we let this test convince you.

One ingredient is pepsin. Another multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva, to digest starch deposits that cling. The alkalinity of the saliva is multiplied also, and at once. That is to neutralize mouth acids which cause tooth decay.

Two factors directly attack the film. One of them keeps teeth so highly polished that film cannot easily adhere.

The effects of Pepsodent come with every application. We constantly combat, in efficient ways, the teeth's great enemies. And millions of teeth are given new protection and new beauty.

Millions now show the effects

In every circle nowadays you see glistening teeth. Ask the owners. You will find, we think, that they are using Pepsodent.

Go get this free tube and try it for yourself. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear.

Then let the children use it. Their teeth need it most. Very few children reach the age of 15 without some tooth decay.

Let the man who smokes see how it takes the stained film from his teeth.

Let all find out how much cleaner teeth feel, how much safer, when brushed in this new way. Then this ten-day test may bring to your home some lifetime effects.

U. S. COMMITTEE FINDS BRITAIN NO LONGER GOVERNS ERIN

MURDER, TORTURE AND ARSON ARE CHARGED TO ENGLAND

American Committee of One Hundred on Ireland, the parent body [illegible] in its membership five State governors, eleven United States senators, seven Protestant Episcopal bishops, four Methodist bishops, [illegible] priests, educators, editors [illegible] and labor leaders from forty-six states of the Union.

The report made today to the Committee of One Hundred was signed by Jane Addams of Hull House; [illegible] Frederick C. Howe, former commissioner of immigration of the Port of New York; James H. Maurer, labor leader; [illegible] Newman; George W. [illegible]; Norman Thomas; [illegible] L. Hollingsworth Wood, chairman, a New York lawyer [illegible] the conclusions of the committee after months of [illegible] and testimony taking, are these:

That the Irish people are deprived of the protection of British law and at the same time denied the privileges of belligerents.

That they are at the mercy of British imperial forces acting contrary to all standards of human conduct.

That 48,000 raids by the military in 1920 give a fair notion of the kind of "law and order" the British are able to maintain.

That British imperialism has failed to govern Ireland, and that its rule of hate can lead to nothing but multiplication of assassinations and a general resort to violence.

Here are the seven main counts in the terrific indictment of the British government in Ireland:

1. The Imperial British Government has created and [illegible] into Ireland a force of at least [illegible] men, many of them [illegible] [illegible] and has incited that force to unbridled violence.

2. The Imperial British forces in Ireland have indiscriminately killed innocent men, women and children; have [illegible] assassinated persons suspected of being Republicans; [illegible] tortured and shot prisoners [illegible] alleging the [illegible] of refusal to halt and attempting to escape; and have attributed [illegible] alleged "Sinn Fein Extremists" the British assassination of prominent Irish Republicans.

3. House burning and wanton destruction of villages and cities by Imperial British forces under Imperial British officers have been countenanced and ordered by officials of the British Government, and elaborate provision by gasoline sprays and bombs has been made in a number of instances for systematic incendiarism as part of a plan of terrorism.

DESTROYS INDUSTRY.

4. A campaign for the destruction of the means of existence of the Irish people have been conducted by the burning of factories, creameries, crops and farm impliments and the [illegible] of farm animals. This campaign [illegible], regardless of the [illegible] views of their owners, and [illegible] widespread and [illegible] suffering among women and children.

5. Acting under a series of proclamations [illegible] by the competent [illegible] authorities of the Imperial British forces, hostages are carried by forces exposed to the fire of the Republican army, fines are levied upon towns and villages as punishment for alleged offences of individuals [illegible] private [illegible] destroyed in [illegible]

MAGNATES MUST TAKE REAL STEPS TO SUPPRESS GAMBLING EVIL

MUST LEAVE NO CHANCE FOR ANOTHER SERIES SCANDAL

By SUNGOD

Much hullabaloo has been raised about the slowness of progress of the cases against the ball players indicted for tossing that hectic White Sox series against the Reds. But that's apart from the question. The athletes have been exiled from the game, their means of livelihood. What happens to them now doesn't worry nine fans out of ten.

That scandal is over, as far as baseball is concerned. The sport has been freed from a flock of tricksters and fear of the law has been put in the hearts of players in general. There will be no more scandals, if the magnates do what they can to keep the gamblers away from the ball parks.

Betting on Ball Games Always Bound to Be

There will always be betting on ball games, as there is on everything else. Nobody objects to friendly wager. It helps to make life interesting. But the professional gamblers must be barred from the ball yards, if another scandal similar to the 1919 horror isn't to be reached.

While bookmakers are allowed to ite the parks; while real money is exchanged on every ball game; while an error in the pinch may be worth a fortune to somebody; while a badly pitched ball may upset an afternoon; so long is the game in jeopardy.

The game itself cannot be blamed because one or two individuals are bad, any more than a million dollars bills should be condemned because a couple are counterfeit.

Magnates Must Take Measures Against Evil

Gambling in the ball yards hasn't exactly been sanctioned by club owners, but only half-hearted methods have been adopted to prevent it. Now that the real effects have been revealed, it's part of the moguls' job to stamp the whole thing out.

That money cannot do everything in baseball, is shown by the case of the New York Giants. Manager McGraw went into the trading market last Winter prepared to get a champion team.. He wasn't in the American League, so he couldn't buy any Red Sox stars.

Several Teams Have Chance to Beat Out Giants

He was forced to try in his own circuit. The other clubs would not sell for cash, and McGraw had no stars to trade. So the little Napoleon had to go after expensive minor league talent. He did, but at present it seems to have availed him little.

Rapp, his third baseman, highly touted in the advance notices, has been stricken with pneumonia, and he is able to start the season, will lose all the benefits of the Spring trip. Davy Bancroft, shortstop, purchased for armfuls of coin, isn't any too well and may not be able to weather the campaign.

The National League, submerged for years by the more dazzling display of the younger organization, seems set to stand on the merits of the teams the magnates have been able to weld together. Half a dozen clubs have a real chance of beating out the plutocratic Giants, who were in as good position to try to buy a pennant as their neighbors, the Yankees.

Young Lady Rests Her Lamps on Our Benny

By DAMON RUNYON.

Scene: Interior of a boxing club. A gent has taken a young lady to see her first boxing bout.

Young Lady (all a-flutter)—Oo-oo, what a funny place! I'm terribly excited. When do they begin?

Gent—Well, they'll start pretty quick now. I see a couple of the preliminary guys coming.

Young Lady (confidentially)—You know, I've been over to see a prize fight ever since I met Benny Leonard. He's a prize fighter, isn't he.

Gent—Yeh, He'll be a prize fighter.

Young Lady—Do you know Benny Leonard?

Gent—Yah, I know him a little. I know him to say hello to him.

Young Lady—Why, I think he's a very nice boy. Is he a nice boy?

Gent—He's all right, I guess.

Young Lady—My girl friend introduced me to him.

Gent (as the first preliminary boxers enter the ring)—Well, they're goin' to do some-pin or other. They're going to fight or else you never see tell about preliminaries.

Young Lady (excitedly)—Don't they look cute. I see a couple of Benny Leonard doesn't look as funny as that. He is nice looking. Don't you think Benny Leonard is nice looking?

Gent—It depends on how I'm lookin' at him. If I get a bet on him he looks nice to me.

Young Lady—Why, the poor fellow's hands are hurt! Look at them all wrapped up!

Gent (unwinding bandages. There's to keep the guy from hurtin' his hands

Young Lady—Does Benny Leonard wear his hands wrapped up that way?

Gent—Sure, he does. All fighters do.

Young Lady (brilliantly)—That's a nice-looking bath robe that man has on. Does Benny Leonard wear a bath robe?

Gent—Yeh, I guess so.

Young Lady—What color is Benny Leonard's bath robe?

Gent (facetiously)—Dandino.

Young Lady—That man's hair is all mussed up. Mr girl's friend says Benny Leonard hates to get his hair mussed up.

Gent—Well, I dunno. I never see him get it mussed much, at that.

Young Lady—Oo-oo! They're hitting each other!

Gent (as the preliminary boxers start)—Well, no so much.

Young Lady (excitedly)—One of them is bleeding! Oo-oo, I'm afraid to look.

Gent—Aw, that don't amount to nothin'. He's only bleeding a little bit from the nose.

Young Lady—Does Benny Leonard ever bleed?

Gent—I never see it if he does. It's kinda hard to make him bleed, I guess.

Young Lady—Oo-oo, I would hate to see him bleed, he's so nice looking. Isn't this a terrible night?

Gent (disgustedly)—Terrible is right! They're a couple bums!

Young Lady—My girl friend says Benny Leonard makes lots of money. My girl friend says her boy friend says Benny Leonard gets a million dollars.

Gent—Well, I dunno, He gets plenty.

Young Lady—When does Benny Leonard fight Jack Dempsey? I saw Jack Dempsey in the pictures once.

Gent—Aw, they don't weigh the same, so they don't fight because they're different weights.

Young Lady—Well, I don't see why that makes any difference. Benny Leonard is champion of the world, isn't he?

Gent—Yes, and so's Dempsey.

Young Lady—Why, how can they both be champions?

Gent—Aw, say—

Young Lady—Well, let's go somewhere else now. I've seen enough. Let's come back some night when Benny Leonard is going to fight. Where does Benny Leonard live?

Gent—Aw, come on!

Johnson Opens War to Oust Baseball Owners

Cleveland, March 31.—Ban B. Johnson, president of the American League, declares that several club owners in both the National and American leagues have not been creditable to baseball and will be driven from the game. He claims that the recent investigation into the baseball scandal brought out the facts of their infidelity.

Johnson said:

"Thirty per cent. of the owners of teams in the American and National Leagues must go. Changes in ownership are necessary for the good of the game, and I expect to see the other owners combine with me in helping bring about the much-needed change." Johnson refused to state who the accused owners are.

"Baseball suffered a temporary setback as a result of the 1919 world's series scandal, and the conduct of the indictments returned against the Chicago players and others involved in the case," Johnson continued. "But new indictments have been returned, and I pledge myself that the cases will be pushed to the limit. Baseball must be cleansed of all rottenness that has injected into its system by a few petty gamblers and several easily tempted players, and I will not rest content until the general public says of the national game that the wound has been thoroughly healed and the guilty have been sufficiently punished."

GARDINI WINS OVER BURNS ON MAT

Italian Gains Honors After 2h. 16m. 30s. of Tame Grappling at Mechanics

Renato Gardini defeated Cyclone Burns with a neck and body hold in 2 hours, 16 minutes, 30 seconds at Mechanics Hall. Four thousand fans witnessed the pair put on as poor a feature bout as has ever been staged hereabouts.

The fall came out of a sort of half-Nelson fling as the rivals squared off on the mat after a near-fall out of the ring that landed Burns on his back. But with plenty of time to roll out of danger of the slow-moving Italian's follow-up. But Cyclone laid there as listlessly as he had wrestled throughout the bout and his shoulders passively submitted as the body smother that followed.

For the first thirty-five minutes neither man went to the mat, both contenting themselves with head and neck massages as they waltzed around the ring and Gardini getting a big lead on fierce facial expressions.

Gardini's Arm Hold Conspicuously Absent

The Italian's arm hold that Lewis allowed him to fasten was conspicuous by its failure to work successfully as the bout dragged on. He brought Burns to the mat several times with a headlock and bowled him over twice with a flying mare, but on both of these occasions the veteran in danger. For that matter the only critical moment resulting from Gardini's aggressiveness was that single one at the climax.

Burns either left his skill in the dressing room or is all in as a wrestler. All to his credit was more wariness than Gardini and his only aim was a tee hold that he fastened on to Gardini's tender foot four times. Each time Cardini was in actual danger, but weird manouvering by Burns permitted the Italian to escape after duly registering agony and dramatically clutching his head when asked by Referee George Bothner if he would resign the fall.

"Doyle Was Robbed of Decision," Says Palozolo

Tony Palozolo, manager of Paul Doyle, today charged that his protege had been robbed of the decision in his ten-round bout with Harlem Eddie Kelly at the Service Men's Club of Worcester.

"The verdict in the Kloby-Doyle bout was very rank," declared Palozolo, "but it was a wonderfully good decision when compared to the one handed down when Paul fought Kelly at Worcester. Doyle chased Kelly for ten rounds, but nevertheless Pooch Donovan, Harvard trainer, gave his vote to Kelly, while Sullivan, the other judge, decided in favor of Kelly.

"Paddy Hehir, who would be wise to restrict his efforts as a referee to wrestling bouts, then looked at Donovan's slip and afterwards decided in favor of Kelly. Sullivan, the judge who decided in favor of Doyle, is ready to tell the story of the entire disgraceful affair to the Boxing Commission. The decision has killed boxing in Worcester.

MACK RILED AND THEN SOME BY COPPEN

Claim of N. E. Title for Young Montreal Disturbs Friedman's Manager

By JACK CONWAY.

Eddie Mack, manager of Abe Friedman, today took a healthy sock, aided by a pen-wielding typewriter, at one Charley Coppen of Providence, manager of Young Montreal.

It seems that Coppen had forgotten all about the fact that Montreal lost his bantamweight title to Friedman, according to the Mack version of things. Here's what Edward had to say today.

"Jack Conway, Boston American.

"Dear Jack:

"Just a few words in behalf of Abe Friedman, the real New England bantamweight champion. Friedman won the New England bantamweight title and jewel at the Arlington Building from Young Montreal of Providence.

"Friedman scaled at the ring 120 pounds at five o'clock, and Friedman weighed 118½ pounds at the ringside. Friedman was under the conditions were the same as when Young Montreal lost the title to Friedman's conqueror, Terry Martin.

"Friedman claims to the New England bantamweight championship by virtue of Young Montreal's defeat by Friedman. Coppen, the resident humbug manager of the Young Montreal, claims that Friedman was in that he never scaled 120 pounds.

"Coppen, at the time, admitted that Friedman tested his man decidedly. Montreal has been training for a few weeks, and the most Friedman since that meeting, but each effort has been unsuccessful. Friedman is willing to give Montreal a chance to regain his title.

"In fact, Mack's move is the suggestion of A. A. U. laws in Canada whereby the athlete concerned and not the hockey association will have to prove the case. Mack says hockey body is not satisfied with the player's amateur status.

In addition to such a suggestion, he has recommended a method by which the hockey association can secure funds.

According to Lou Marsh, the Canadian referee who handled the Cleveland-B. A. A. games, the Quebec A. H. A. had no money to fight the Dufresne case, and according to Montreal reports, Skilton's alleged agreement to pay the court cost and withdraw the case was to a considerable degree responsible for the prompt issuance of an amateur card to the Shoe Trade's player.

21 FLAT FOR THE FURLONG

Paddock made a record, 'bout a week ago;
Judges didn't like it, said, "The breezes blow."
'Course they'd liked to grant it, yet they didn't know
Whether he'd of done it, did the wind not show;
But, just four days later, starter sounded, "Go!"
Paddock shot out from the mark, swifter than a doe,
Started down the cinder path, anything but slow.
Muttering, "I bet this time you won't tell me, 'No.'"
And if you believe me, listen to this, 'bo,
That remark that Paddock made proved mighty apropos.

PERRY WANTS TO BOX IN BOSTON AGAIN

Charley Barry, Boston representative of Jack Perry, Pittsburgh welterweight, who made such a good showing against Eddie Sherlin at the Armory Club, today called to state that he has $500 which he was prepared to post to bind a match between the Smoky City star and Sherlin, Kloby or Siegal. What a fight Perry would make against either Kloby or Siegal. A lot of fans believe he would stop Kloby, while he would have more trouble if opposed by Siegal.

WELCOME (?) STRANGER

Jack Johnson comes out in July;
Give a Razz!
From Leavenworth jail he will fly;
Lots o' jazz!
Matchmakers will book him from ocean to sea,
With setups and francups, if we'll pay the fee,
Give a Razz!
With some jazz.
Give a Razz-berr-EEE!!!

The question is, "Is It?"

These ice sports sure gain our nanny. After the Skilton; the Dufresne; the Haddock, and the Skilton-Dufresne-Haddock controversies in ice hockey, have been folded up and packed away—somewhat the worse for wear—they spring a speed skating wrangle on us.

Art Staff, who by virtue of Bobby McLean's repeated refusals to meet him, and his defeats of other leading contenders, claims the world's indoor skating championship, made special trip to the office to tell us many things. Among them were the following:

1. That he would not skate for D. R. Scanlon, the promoter of the ice races booked at the Arena tomorrow night.
2. That Wilbur McGowan who is listed as a starter, is a third rate performer, who has been beaten repeatedly by Staff and others.
3. That he (Staff) would not race McLean in anything but races for the world's title.
4. That the so-called world's skating championships arranged by Promoter Scanlon were a joke.

Then a few hours later there came a telephone call from Promoter Scanlon in which he announced the following Arena program:

1. Match races between Staff and McGowan on Thursday and Friday nights for the world's professional indoor championships.
2. A special 220-yard exhibition race between Staff and Bobby McLean on Friday night.

If you, dear reader, know what actually is to take place at the Arena tonight and tomorrow night, drop us a line.

Well rowed, Cambridge. Well rowed, I sye.

I'LL SAY SO

Our hat's off to you, Mrs. Hurd,
You played ably while rivals' play slurred;
Neither Glenna Collett's,
Nor the golf of Miss Letts
Holled you at Pinehurst. You're a bird.

Eddie Mack rises to inquire how long it is since a former champion is permitted to retain his title after he has been whipped by a man of the same weight under prescribed championship conditions. Young Montreal furnishes the subject matter. Eddie having an idea that Abe Friedman took the New England bantamweight title from the Providence young man.

Prexy Granger of the Quebec A. H. A., either has drawn a lesson from the Dufresne case, or is anticipating further complications with Rambling Raymie Skilton.

His latest move is the suggestion of A. A. U. laws in Canada whereby the athlete concerned and not the hockey association will have to prove the case. Mack says hockey body is not satisfied with the player's amateur status.

In addition to such a suggestion, he has recommended a method by which the hockey association can secure funds.

According to Lou Marsh, the Canadian referee who handled the Cleveland-B. A. A. games, the Quebec A. H. A. had no money to fight the Dufresne case, and according to Montreal reports, Skilton's alleged agreement to pay the court cost and withdraw the case was to a considerable degree responsible for the prompt issuance of an amateur card to the Shoe Trade's player.

UMPIRES CAN'T FINE PLAYERS ANY MORE

American Association Officials Will Have to Refer Questions to League Head

Minneapolis, Minn., March 31.—Umpires in the American Association will not be allowed to impose fines on the players this season under a word sent out to club owners by Thomas J. Hickey, president of the league, according to advices received here today. They may recommend fines to the league board, however, and will retain the privilege of withholding a player from the field if deemed necessary.

BRAVES INFIELD IS MANAGER'S ONLY WORRY

All Braves Manager Needs to Round Out Team Is Couple of Good Basemen

By NICK FLATLEY.

Galveston, Texas, March 31.—Collision with Sand Crabs, as they call the Galveston nine, was the program of the day in these polishing off periods of the Braves' training trip. Defeating the natives has been about as easy as eating three times a day for our athletes, but the game was considered enough of a daily stint to keep the athletes on edge.

The let-up of the last few days has benefited the squad generally, and the last-lap baseball of the record-week-end has departed along with the cold snap. The players, with very few exceptions, are in shape to go the regulation distance at full tilt, and the noontime struggles have given all hands a chance to get in on the work.

If Manager Mitchell had a couple of seasoned infielders banging around this village, he wouldn't have a care in the world. He's satisfied with his outfielders and catchers, and believes that his pitchers will hold up, if the team shows any class. But he needs a few more ground grabbers, beyond any doubt.

FRANK BANCROFT SUCCUMBS TO ILLNESS

Aged Business Manager of Reds Dead at Cincinnati; Was Born in Lancaster

Cincinnati, O., March 31.—Frank Bancroft is dead.

After an illness of several months this old-time player and manager, who maintained active interest in the game as chairman of the board of the Cincinnati team until just prior to his illness, passed away at a local hospital today.

Bancroft was born in Lancaster, Mass., May 23, 1863. At the outbreak of the Civil War he enlisted as a drummer boy in the Union forces and served until peace was declared.

He then became actively interested in roller polo and baseball, being associated with several Massachusetts, Rhode Island and New York teams as both player and promoter.

His first big success in baseball came in 1884, when he was manager of the Providence team of the National League. In his second year there his team won the National League pennant and then played the famous Metropolitans of New York, winners of the championship of the old American Association, in the first world's series on record.

Fight Results

At Taunton—Joe Kelly of Erie, Pa., defeated Johnny Ross of St. Paul in the main bout of ten rounds at the Massasoit A. C. show. The three other bouts ended in second round knockouts, Frank Sullivan, Young Derrick and Young Archibald being victors respectively over Young Cillis, Bison Beauvais and Young Ricks.

At Cleveland—Bryan Downey defeated Young Fisher in twelve rounds.

At Pittsfield—Bobby Dole of New York defeated Joe Dillon, also of New York, in ten rounds.

Tryouts at Stadium Loom Up Large

The National A. A. U. tryouts to be held in the Harvard Stadium on June 17 give promise of being one of the biggest athletic events of the year. There is talk that athletic stars from New York, Philadelphia and Washington, as well as those from New England, will compete in these preliminaries to the National meeting, which is to be held in Pasadena, Cal., on Independence Day.

A notice was also sent to the assistant secretary of the hockey club not to accept the appointment of H. Guy Hedwell as an authorized agent for J. E. L. Ross, the Canadian sportsman.

Naturally these two acts by the club are causing talk. The talk has to do with the race between Matt O'Wara and Sir Barton at Windsor last Fall. The procedure of suspending action of Feustel's license until now lends to the assumption that the club has made an investigation of rumors current ever since the classic race.

In some quarters it is thought likely that Commander Ross will object to the ruling of the club and that he may confine his racing to Canadian and Maryland tracks.

Feustel Gets License as Trainer for Riddle

New York, March 31.—At a meeting of the jockey club here Louis Feustel, trainer of Man o' War, was granted a license to train for Samuel D. Riddle. His application for a licence had been "laid on the table" at the meeting several weeks ago.

Friedman to Battle Max Williamson

Abe Friedman, the real bantamweight champion, after a layoff of two months, will go over the ten-round route with Maxie Williamson at the Carlyle A. A. Monday night in an all-star show.

The Philadelphia bantamweight has won newspaper decisions over the following good bantams: Young Dooley, Hoyt, Earl Puryear, Joe O'Donnell, Patsey Johnson, Johnny Buff, Willie Spencer, Jabez White, Patsy Wallace and many lesser lights.

Friedman will be in prime shape to crawl through the ropes, and if he can win over Williamson matchmakers Johnny Mannuer of the Fanueil A. C. will try and bring Joe Lynch, the world's bantamweight champion, here to box Friedman at the boxing mat.

CHAPTER XXVII.

THE City Trust Building was the newest and most impressive business structure in the city. It stood on the corner next east from the News Building; sixteen stories high, with four local and two express elevators.

Thither, promptly at nine in the morning, came Henry Calverly, carrying his old alpaca coat wrapped in a newspaper.

When he reached the office, an efficient-looking, well dressed young woman came in, glanced at him, waited while the calm-faced girl pressed a button, opened the partition door and passed in. A moment later she reappeared, made sure that he was Mr. Calverly, showed him along the corridor, through the outer private office and into the corner room.

"You may want to look these over," she remarked, and left a heap of papers on an end of the table.

He glanced them over; then drew up a chair, plunged his fingers into his hair; studied them.

There were proofs of advertisements, all built about that "Whits bathroom" phrase. There were booklets picturing a porcelain factory, showing the processes of manufacture; interviews, illustrated, with officers of the company; a clip of letters bearing on the advertising problem; blue prints of the new tile factory, and so on.

He asked the young woman for pencil and paper, and tried rephrasing the advertisements about the "Perfect Porcelain" idea.

New Version

After each such moment he plunged at his self-appointed task; wrote a new version of the advertisement.

At half past ten the door opened and Holmes Hitt appeared. He wore a smoothly pressed, perfect fitting suit of pale linen, with a tie of cool blue silk.

"Good morning!" he said; glanced at the papers and perhaps with amusement at Calverly's tousled hair; drew up a chair. "What are you doing?"

"Oh, just trying an advertisement."

"Let me see."

But before looking over the scribbled pages, the calm eyes of Holmes Hitt surveyed the room. They rested on the newspaper parcel on a chair. He reached under the table. A buzzer sounded faintly. The decorative secretary promptly appeared.

Holmes Hitt's gaze indicated the parcel.

The secretary glanced from it to Calverly.

"It's mine," said that young man, a little flushed, feeling like his parcel, more than ever out of place.

"Oh, all right," remarked Holmes Hitt.

The secretary disappeared.

"As for this stuff," remarked Holmes Hitt, fingering the papers, "what you've done is to write nice phrases. And too many of them. Nothing in that. You must visualize the woman you'll be writing at."

"Woman?"

"Certainly. You're dealing with homes. Every home means a woman. You've got to think Perfect Porcelain so hard that you think it straight from your head into hers."

A soft buzzer sounded.

Calmly Holmes Hitt rose, slid back a panel over the table, and drew out a telephone instrument.

"I'll for you," he said.

A feminine voice fell on Calverly's ear. A familiar voice.

"It's me," said the voice; adding, after a moment, "Mary Maloney. This—is Mr. Staf—Mr. Calverly, isn't it? . . . I called up the News, and they said I might find you here. I had an awful time getting anybody there that would say anything. . . . Where am I? Why, right down here by the News building, in the drug store. Listen! Could you come down for just a minute? Two telegrams came. They just left them lying on the table in the hall, and I thought they might be important, and so I . . ."

Calverly turned.

Already the secretary had entered, with mail. She stood at Holmes Hitt's elbow while he went swiftly through the thick pile of papers, pausing now and then to outline a brief reply.

"I'm afraid I—I'd better step out, just for a moment."

Holmes Hitt merely moved his head.

Uncomfortably aware that he was being drawn momentarily farther from Perfect Porcelain and the new relation with life, Calverly went down to the drug store.

Mary's little plump person rose from a stool by the soda fountain. Her face was suffused with color. She was smiling expectantly. She seemed unexpectedly pretty. Her great, curiously honest eyes moved him to a feeling of gentle regard, even of tenderness, that was yet like a faint revival of an old memory, of something that had happened very long ago.

One telegram was from Parker, in Chicago.

It read, in the familiar telegraphic jumble of words.—

No Other Legatee

"Can you come at once discuss estate as there is no other legatee I prefer take no steps without advice from you and there are many matters should be gone over carefully or if you cannot come will go to you important."

This stirred no particular interest in his breast, so he slipped it into a coat pocket.

The other was from Humphrey Weaver, offering either to come at once or to send money. A few extra words of cordial import warmed his heart as such words do when on a telegram form.

He walked out with Mary to the street.

On the step of a River street car she hesitated; looked back.

He was standing motionless, holding his hat above his head.

Calverly returned to the room at the top of the City Trust Building, pausing only long enough to telegraph Humphrey that he had a job, was in excellent spirits, and needed no help.

Holmes Hitt made room for him at the table.

"There's no other way," said Holmes Hitt, taking up a half-tone of an elaborately equipped bathroom. "By the sheer power of words you lure the more Perfect Porcelain from the factory to the freight yards, over hundreds, even thousands, of miles of railroads, through wholesale and retail plumbing establishments, into six thousand of those homes."

Calverly looked at him, a kindling light in his eye, a touch of color in his cheeks.

"All right," he said. "I'll do it. I'll put everything else aside. It's worth the chance."

"It is your chance," said Holmes Hitt.

The door opened.

"There are several newspaper men outside," said the secretary, quietly, "to see Mr. Calverly."

"I won't see them!" cried that young man.

Holmes Hitt thought this over. "Yes, you will," he said. "You'll have to. May as well get it over with."

"But I've told them all I——" And Calverly, sputtering, went out to the bare little coop by the outer door. Three young men were sitting on the bench. Two of them he seemed to know. They had doubtless been in the group at the boarding-house.

"Mr. Calverly," said one, "we hear from Chicago that your attorney in Chicago expects you out there today."

Calverly spread his hands.

"He confirms the news that the entire fortune has been left to you. You're a millionaire, of course. When are you leaving?"

"I'm not leaving."

"You said you were not going to Chicago?"

"I said that. I'm not."

"Then this Mr. Parker will be coming here?"

"No. I don't know."

"Of course, Mr. Calverly, you must realize that in taking this attitude you are suggesting a bigger story than any we've got so far. Do you mean to stay that you are refusing this fortune?"

A Conspirator Against Time

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1921, by International Feature Service, Inc.

OR rather two conspirators against Time—she and he—the fascinating girl who sees in the steadily falling sands of the hour-glass nothing but a fall, and the daring, laughing young plotter who knows he can make the world stand still with a wave of his hand—BUT—there's always a BUT—he has to have the assurance that two hearts are as one—he has to be sure that love is there because it is only by love that Time can be conquered—it is only by love that the great conspiracy can be successfully carried out. Once love vanishes, then indeed Time laughs and—so you see if you would grow old gracfully you must have Love as a side partner.

The Second Generation

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

CHAPTER LXXII.

Copyright, 1921, by Star Company.

NATURE is an exacting old dame. She usually makes us pay, sooner or later, if we overdraw our account with her.

Mary Throckmorton had made a tremendous draft upon her self-control and upon her nerve forces during her conversation with Irene Lawrence. All through the afternoon she was conscious of this fact, but she combatted any signs of weakness and performed her office work with her usual swiftness and accuracy.

It was when she reached home that she remembered that she had eaten nothing since morning.

"You look completely fagged out," her mother remarked.

"I ate no luncheon," Mary said. "So I feel a bit faint. I will be all right when I have had my dinner."

"You ate no luncheon? I thought you were to lunch with Irene Lawrence."

"That is how I happened not to eat," Mary said with a hysterical giggle. "Don't ask me about it now, dear. It was dreadful, but I cannot talk of it yet."

"Very well, honey," her mother soothed. "I won't say a word about it. Just try to forget it."

This Mary could not do, although she forced herself to talk pleasantly through dinner. It was not until Peter had gone out, and she and Mortimer were alone in the living room that she let herself speak of her interview of that noon. Mortimer introduced the subject.

"You met Irene, she tells me," Mary started nervously. "You have seen her?"

"No." Mortimer shook his head. "I had a telephone from her. From that I gathered that she had been rather hateful to you."

"Did she say that?"

Upheld by Mortimer

"Goodness!" he laughed. "Do you know my sister so little as to fancy she would ever admit she had done anything that was not strictly correct? Not she! But she told me she had a plain talk with you. I know what a plain talk with Irene means."

His tone was light, but he was studying the face before him. He had already noticed its pallor, also the dark circles under the eyes. Love is keen, and this man's intuition told him much.

Mary tried to laugh, but her voice trembled. In a moment her lover's arms were about her.

"Tell me what Irene said," he commanded.

She shook her head. "I cannot." "You must, dear."

"I will cry if I do."

"Then cry—right here on my shoulder."

But she did not tell him—only answered such questions as he asked. But what she told of Irene her was enough to move him to wrath.

"Yet, after all, a part of what she said cannot be denied." Mary reminded him. "You are engaged to a girl who is not your equal in birth or in breeding—whose family is not equal to yours in"——

He stopped her by laying his hand over her lips.

"Not equal to mine, eh? Let me express my views on this subject! My father inherited his money; your father made his. Does that show an inferiority on your father's part? My mother—bless her!—is devoted to her children; so is yours. So let us leave those two dears out of the discussion. Shall we?"

Mary nodded, patting his hand approvingly. Even if she knew that Mrs. Lawrence regretted her son's choice of a wife, she was glad the son did not discuss his mother's weaknesses.

"Well, then, it comes down to you and Irene," Mortimer said. "Irene is a snob, and you are a—darling!" he ended with a laugh, and kissed her.

Not Conclusive

"That is hardly what I would call a conclusive argument," Mary said, trying to laugh as merrily as he, and failing signally. "But, dear, what are you going to do about it?"

"About what?"

"About marrying — and everything?"

"I will tell you," he said gravely. "I am going to work our business up—Peter's and mine—and when I am able to I am going to marry you."

"But your family!"

"My mother will accept my wife," he declared confidently. "As for Irene—she can hardly care this for the girl of my choice than I care for the man of hers!" with a shrug.

"When we meet, we will be civil. May it not be often!"

Perhaps Mortimer saw his mother and spoke his mind to her. For at the end of a week a note came to Mary from Mrs. Lawrence, wishing her happiness and congratulating her on her engagement.

"Which is about all I can expect of my future mother-in-law," Mary mused after she had read the note and answered it politely. "Families are queer things. I hope that some day Mort and I can move away from New York, for we do need not see his people unless we want to. Yet, two years ago I longed to live in a big city!"

"But now — well — if Mortimer could go with me, I would like any old place in the wide world. His family may think our engagement is foolish and imprudent and all the rest of it. Really, it does not matter what they think. For myself, I am certain that Mort and Peter are going to make good."

She had stopped calling her brother "Pierre." Somehow, she liked "Peter" better now.

Useless Alarm.

A few days ago a well-dressed and charming young lady hailed a cab, there being no taxi in sight. Just as she was getting in she noticed that the horse seemed inclined to be frisky.

He was jumping about swishing his tail in a way that alarmed her—she was a timid little thing.

So she addressed a few words to the aged Jehu.

"I hope," she said, smiling bravely, "that you will not run away with me."

The cabby sighed mournfully—"No, mum," he replied. "I have a wife and seven kids at 'ome already."

Disappointed.

The steeplejack was repairing a shaft high above the city street. It was an errand boy who saw him first, and he fetched some of his friends.

Presently a down-at-heel person joined the group and in a few minutes a small crowd of earnest onlookers had collected.

They waited half an hour. They waited an hour.

The steeplejack worked on unconcernedly. Then the first comer took the sense of the meeting, as to speak, as he turned to go.

"'E ain't going to fall," he said.

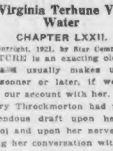
The Bachelor Girl's Reflections

BY HELEN ROWLAND

Copyright, 1921, by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

LOVE is a rainbow, the colors of which are apt to run, under the constant shower of a woman's tears.

The Spring hat is as old as Eve! Decorating the head is a primitive custom, which appeals to the aboriginal in every normal woman; but men have discarded nearly all forms of personal adornment—probably because to beautify themselves would be "gilding the lily."



No matter how devoid of curiosity a man may be, he can't help wondering why a woman moistens her lips, pats her hair and smiles radiantly when she is talking over the telephone.

You can tell much more about what sort of wife a girl will make by studying her father than by looking at her mother. If father looks happy and rocky and has plenty of spending money, perhaps "man-spoiling" will run in the family.

In love, a man loses, first, his head, then his balance, then his sense of proportion, then his caution, then his heart—and, finally, his liberty.

Never waste your tears on the girls a man should have married, and didn't; save them all for the girl he will some day marry, and shouldn't!

When a man is twenty, women appeal to his eyes; when he is thirty, they appeal to his mind or his senses; at forty, to his sympathies; and, after that, to his vanity—or his sense of humor.

What "lures" a man from a woman is not his love of a blonde manicurist or a Titian widow, but his love of adventure, of amusement, of novelty, of a change. The "other woman" is never the cause of his defection; she is merely the result.

Today's Daughter: "My face is my beauty specialist's fortune, sir," she said.

"For Love"

An Absorbing Romance By Ruby M. Ayres

PART II.—Continued

PHILIP stopped his pacing up and down their apartment and looked down at Eve.

"And you think that you will be happy—living like this?" he asked hardily.

A wave of desolation swept over her. Happy—when every beautiful dream and hope in life was dead!

She dragged her eyes to his face.

"I think I shall get used to it—in time—if you * * * if you will be—be patient with me," she said choking.

"Patient! * * *" when his heart was breaking.

"I'm sorry—I'm telling you that I'd die for you this moment, because you won't believe me, I know," he said, in a strangled voice. "It's no use telling you that you've taken everything from me that I shall ever care about, because you won't believe that—either. * * * Will you? —will you?" He drove the words at her.

For a moment her determination trembled in the balance. Was it the truth—she longed to believe him * * * but he had been as clever before—he had deceived her before with words and kisses, and brought her to this suffering. * * * Not again! Oh, never again could she live through it.

She forced her cold lips to speak.

"No—I don't believe it," she said, voicelessly.

Philip turned blindly away. There was a little throbbing pulse hammering madly in his temple; he felt as if he were choking.

Reached the Door

He reached the door and stood there grasping the handle, hardly knowing what he was doing; he felt as if pride and desire were fighting for possession of his very soul.

If he left her now, this would be the end of everything, he knew. He could never go back again and plead with her; it was for all their lives.

His fingers mechanically turned the handle and opened the door. Then suddenly he shut it again with a slam, he went back to where his wife sat; he put his arms round her and, lifting her up to him, held her against his heart.

"Give me a chance to make you care," he said brokenly. "I know I'm a rotter—I know I'm not good enough for you—I'll be patient—I'll not ask anything . . . just tell me that perhaps—some day—Eva—I'm fond of you . . . After all, I'm your husband."

But she had reached the end of her endurance; she struggled free of him; she put the width of the table between them and faced him across it, white-lipped and panting.

"I've done my share," she said shrilly. "I've kept my part of the compact. I've nothing more to give you—nothing."

She met his blazing eyes, and sudden fear for him lifted her heart. She backed away from him to the door; she put out her hands as if to ward him off.

Philip caught them both in one of his—he put an arm around her holding her so that she was like a child in his grasp.

"You're my wife," he said hoarsely. "You can't undo that, no matter how much you try; but if you think I want a woman who looks at me as you do—who—hates me as you do—" He let her go so violently that she almost fell. He turned away from her and, tramping into a chair, hid his face on his outflung arms.

There was a long silence, broken only by the girl's frightened breathing; then she opened the door slowly — slowly, and crept away, leaving him there alone.

Day After Wedding

The day after her marriage Eva wrote letters to Peter.

"I dare say you will be surprised to hear that Philip and I have decided to stay in town after all. I've never really seen New York properly—not the rich side of it, I mean, and it looks as if the weather is going to break up, and I should hate the country if it rained all day. I don't know if we shall stay at this hotel. I like it all right, but, anyway, any letters sent here will be forwarded."

Peter was amazed. Eva had been so frightfully keen on the country and, as for the possibility of the weather breaking up, well, he looked out of the window at the bright sunshine, and a little qualm touched his heart.

He had not got forgotten his sister's tragic face that moment, when she had clung to him on the landing, and though he could not understand it he in some vague way connected the incident with this letter.

He was so perturbed about it that he put it in his pocket and did not mention it to anyone. He was extremely fond of Eva, and it worried him considerably to think that perhaps something really serious was the matter.

She had looked happy enough in church while they were married. He had heard comments on all sides about her radiant face. It didn't seem at all likely that anything could have occured between the moment of leaving the church and his own encounter with her on the landing of the house to spell tragedy.

But he felt unhappy about it all day. He even kept away from Kitty Arlington, although he had promised to go around in the afternoon. Twice he sat down to write to Eva, and each time tore up what he had written.

It was all nonsense to be so concerned! She was all right.

An Absorbing Romance

Philip was a thundering good chap.

He was glad all the same when, after tea, Tom Calligan came over from the Highway house; Peter liked Calligan.

Persuaded to Stay

He had been persuaded to stay on till the end of the week, he explained—Mrs. Winterdick said she missed Philip so, that she must have someone to take his place.

"So I thought I would stroll over and dig you up," he added casually.

As a matter of fact, he was anxious to get better acquainted with Eva's family; presently he asked if anybody had heard from the happy pair. "It's not likely, though, I suppose," he added. "They'll have no time to write letters home."

Peter hesitated; he had not meant to mention his sister's letter to anyone, but all at once he changed his mind.

"Well, as a matter of fact, I had a letter from Bonnie this morning," he said uncomfortably.

"Bonnie!" echoed Calligan, not understanding.

"Yes—we call Eva 'Bonnie,' you know. She wrote from town——" He hesitated; he looked at Calligan critically. "I say, you won't tell anybody if I tell you something, will you?" he added in embarrassment.

"Of course not—what' is it? Nothing wrong, I hope.

"I don't know . . ." Peter produced the letter from his pocket. "They were going to the country, you know; Eva was fearfully keen, and all the rest of it, but in this letter she says that they have decided to stay in town! Think of it—grilling weather like this."

Calligan looked blank.

"Well, why not, if they prefer it?" he said.

"I know—but that's not it." Peter ran agitated fingers through his hair. "I don't know in the least why I'm telling you at all," he said awkwardly, "except that I suppose you know Philip better than I do. . . . Look here, he's all right—isn't he? Decent chap and all that?"

Calligan answered without a second's hesitation.

"He's one of the best—never knew a straighter fellow in all my life."

Peter looked relieved.

"I'm glad to hear you say that, because . . ." he hesitated.

"It sounds silly now I know," he apologized. "But I've been rather worried about Eva—just before she went, and then the wedding, something happened—I don't know what it was, but she was dreadfully upset, and then this letter coming on top of it . . . you see what I mean, don't you?" he asked, helplessly.

Did Not Answer

Calligan did not answer for a moment; then he said, slowly, carefully:

"She probably was upset about leaving home. Lots of girls are, you know; I don't think there's anything to worry about."

"She's such a sport, you know," Peter went on, earnestly. "I should have to think she'd made a mess of it—you know what I mean?"

"Yes, but I'm sure there's no fear of that. I've known Phil for years—he's all right; he's a white man."

But though Peter had in reality said very little, he had somehow managed to convey his own uneasiness to Calligan, and he laid awake longer than usual that night, thinking about Eva and wondering.

It certainly had struck him as odd that Philip had never even mentioned her name to Peter, and then wrote to acquaint him with his coming marriage. Philip was rather a communicative person as a rule; and, now he came to think it over, Calligan remembered that there had been another girl to whom his friend had been rather attentive early in the Spring—a fluffy-haired girl who had been a guest at the wedding.

He could not remember her name but he could remember having chaffed Phil quite a lot about her on his last visit to the Highway House. Anyway, she wasn't a patch on Eva Dennison, so it could not be possible that there had been any trouble made there; he resolved to ask Peter about it next time they met.

It was with this intention that he went over to the Dennisons the following morning. He found that Peter was not quite so pleased to see him as he had been previously; he said something about having an appointment down at the village; that he was sorry to be unsociable, but that he was in the deuce of a hurry.

"That's all right," Caligan said easily. "I'll walk along with you. I'm in no hurry."

Peter was not particularly pleased, but he had to submit, and the two men strolled along together.

Calligan was not very good at diplomacy and he went straight to the object of his visit without preamble.

"What's the name of that fluffy-haired girl who used to be at Winterdicks' rather a lot in the Spring? She was at the wedding. I know you remember speaking to her, but I'm hanged if I can think of her name."

Union's Refusal to Accept Arbitration in Building Strike Is Foolish

Refusal by the delegates of the Boston Building Trades Council to agree to the arbitration suggestions from the State Board of Arbitration and Conciliation, which urged the strikers to return to work at the $1 per hour rate of wage until such time as the dispute could be definitely settled, is foolish.

It is foolish because it puts the strikers in the wrong before the public.

It is foolish because it throws away an opportunity for the strikers to obtain at least part of what they have been fighting for.

But it is particularly foolish because it gives anti-union interests a handle with which to strike unionism a telling blow.

The master builders were far wiser. They saw a chance to put themselves before the people of the State in a favorable light, and there can be no doubt that by their acceptance of the board's suggestions they have done just that.

There can be no question about the obvious duty of both employer and employe to end the building trades strike as speedily as possible.

Never before has the housing situation been so acute, and with building operations tied up by a strike it daily becomes more pressing.

Shelter is one of the vital necessities of mankind in this climate. The strike of the builders hits directly at this necessity and results in a further increase in the already high rents people are being forced to pay, in lowering of the standard of accommodation, in overcrowding and a host of attendant ills, physical and moral.

The rich are the last to feel the effects of this shortage. It is the great middle working class which is nipped first and hardest. It is the child of the working man who first feels and shows the effects of underhousing and overcrowding. It is his daughter who is first exposed to the influences that inevitably follow such overcrowding.

In justice then to the men and women of his own class the members of the Building Trades Council should make any necessary sacrifice, should strain every nerve to bring this dispute to a speedy end, so that building may be resumed in Massachusetts and the needs of the community met in so far as possible.

For the union leaders to allow the impression to get abroad that they are stubbornly indifferent to the welfare of the general public is foolish. It is worse, it is a crime against the public and against the principles of unionism.

Against Whom Is Japan So Busily Preparing for War?

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

Recent news dispatches discuss in great detail the feverish energy with which Japan is building up a great military air service.

It is reported that her agents are everywhere in Europe purchasing airplanes and that she is so anxious to train her young men in the air service that, imitating the Kaiser, she has had one of the imperial princes join the service in order to stimulate interest in it.

So great has the interest grown in the service that no one country in Europe is able to give the instruction to the number of young men the Japanese Government is sending to Europe to receive instruction in the military use of the airplane. Large contingents of Japanese have been sent to all allied countries to learn their methods of fighting in the air.

With their genius for imitation, the Japanese have turned from the Germans as their military instructors to the latest fashion in militarism, which is French. The French have sent a large mission of military instructors to Japan to make that warlike nation more military and more capable of defeating some white people some day.

France has evidently forgotten the statement that the French Ambassador to Japan made concerning his observations of Japanese loyalty during the war to the cause of France and England. The French Ambassador declared that when in 1917 Germany had the allies on their knees, Japan was preparing to desert the sinking entente ship like a rat and only hesitated because she knew that the United States had the power, if she had the will, to turn the scales against Germany even if Japan should transfer herself to the German side.

The French Ambassador further declared that the real object of the Japanese mission to the United States at that time was to investigate and report back to the Japanese Government their opinion whether or not the United States had gone into the war with a determination to win or had gone into it as a form of protest against Germany's submarine campaign. It was the report of this mission that the United States had the will to conquer AND WOULD CONQUER that kept Japan loyal to her engagements, so the French Ambassador said.

Today France is letting her best aviation instructors teach Japan, while Germany has sent to the Far East, at the invitation of Japan, her best young commanders of submarines.

Disarming Germany Too Thoroughly

It May Mean Trouble, Not Safety, for the Allies

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

Germany for the time being has conquered the Communist outbreak. So says the latest news, which is as important to France and to England as it is to Germany. It is more important, in fact, to England and France, since they have more to lose than Germany.

It will perhaps occur to the allies, after this latest attempt at revolution in Germany, that it is not altogether wise to force a nation to disarm so thoroughly as to leave it at the mercy of revolution within, and from Russia.

Germany has a powerful, closely organized capitalist class. The question just now is SHALL CAPITALISM, slightly tempered by democracy, CONTINUE TO RULE THE EARTH OR SHALL IT GIVE WAY TO COMMUNISM. Lloyd George's recent speech shows that he looks on union labor and socialism as twin bogies, and the situation worries him. This would seem to be a time for all good capitalists to stick together, regardless of nationality, if they don't want to be pulled apart separately.

By Nellie Bly

THERE has been no readjustment of the code of equality for men and women in morality.

Ideas are as fixed today and as prejudiced regarding the morals of women and the morals of man as they were in the days of Adam and Eve.

Not only is the world's attitude on this issue apparently quite unchangeable, but the masculine belief and doctrine are absolutely immovable.

No line of caste or station governs a man's fancies. He considers himself free to select what pleases him. Men are never shocked to hear of a man's intrigue with his wife's chambermaid or cook. But the whole world howls with wide-opened mouth and uplifted hands if a wife finds her good-looking footman or handsome butler attractive.

Woman Suffrage

Semi-equality may be given to women in suffrage; it may even be given in business, but in morality —never! What is good for the gander is not good for the goose. The gander may toss it over a whole harem of high-pedigreed and low, but let Mrs. Goose cast her eye upon a promising gander gosling and there's war to the finish in gooseland.

The same lack of equality holds good in regard to parentage. A woman who gives birth to a child illegitimately is forever damned. A man may be an illegitimate father repeatedly in public and not the faintest reproach being whispered against him.

Of course, sinful and unjust as it is, it is the child who must always bear the burden. And another strange feature of it is this: Almost invariably the illegitimate mother will shield and endeavor to protect her child. But the illegitimate father in almost every case has no more feeling for his child than a cat has for a baby rat.

Here's a letter from a soldier:

Soldier Tells His Experience.

Miss Nelly Bly: Perhaps you will give me some advice. When I was ten years old my father deserted my mother and her three little children, the eldest of which was twelve. She struggled to get along, but it was starvation. At the age of twelve I went to work, sacrificing my chances for an education for the sake of my oldest brother, who had lost a leg in an accident. So he was sent to school and I to work, but the combined efforts of my mother and myself could barely keep our little family from starving. My mother suffered more for us than herself. Then she met a man. He was kind to her and us children. He brought gifts to our house, and the first all meal we ever ate was what he provided. My mother had received no divorce. She had no funds to secure one. Poor mother, she sold herself for us children. The man has been very good to my motehr and to us, and some day they hope to be married.

"When the war came on I ran away and enlisted at the age of fifteen. I was very large for my age. At sixteen I was the youngest non-commissioned officer in the army. I held and was discharged as a sergeant first class.

"On Christmas day, 1918, I met a nurse at the post where I was stationed. She was very pretty and attractive. I was the post physical director and athletic instructor—a very good position for a boy of my age. I have not only developed my mind but my body, and was good to look at. If I must say so myself.

"The nurse and I grew to be pretty good friends. She thought I was twenty-four years of age, and suddenly in March, 1919, after having been in each other's company every night, we found that we cared quite a little for one another.

"Just before receiving her discharge as a nurse the 1st of June she went home. A few days later she broke the news to me. I wrote her to come to me, but the day before my letter arrived she was taken ill. Her father is a very prominent man, highly respected. She was afraid to tell him, so I talked the matter over with my major, and he said: 'Marry the girl, my boy, and make good.'

Determines to Do His Duty

"I talked to her father over long distance and hung up on him. Then her mother called me and talked to me. That night I asked myself this: 'Why not play a real man's part and do the right thing?' So off to her home I went, became a married man and came back to the old army life and almost forgot I had a wife. Sent for her in December. Was discharged in January with the final pay of $95, and $100 I had won shooting craps, making a total or $195. A man's job to handle. Went to work as trainman. Made good and got along fine until the big strike, then was laid off. Did not work for one month.

"Knowing the baby was coming and no money, I began looking for help. Borrowed $50 from the Red Cross; went like wildfire. Than my wife received her bonus of $100. That left us soon. Then comes the worst thing of my life.

"My wife did not know anything about me or about my mother or home or about my age. I worried over all this and it got the best of me. I quit like a dog and left her, the baby a month away. I thought if I got out by myself I would forget. But not a chance. I finally landed in Jacksonville, Florida. Then I wrote to her. This was along about March. I couldn't rest. I worked until I had money enough to get back to her. Landed here in April. My baby had been born Easter morn.

Brother Refused

"I met her brother. He refused to let me see either her or the baby, or tell me where they were. He told her where I was and she wrote me. Of course, her people would not stand for me to see either her of the baby, but she came to me and I saw her today. Tomorrow I am going to see my baby.

"Now, here is the point: My wife is willing to cast her lot with me once again, no matter what I have done, but I am unable to do a thing. I landed in the city with six cents in my pocket, have been working a week in a restaurant, and now I have got a decent pair of shoes and a new shirt, with a total capital of thirty cents—two dimes and two nickels. A very poor prospect of making good, but happy because I have seen my wife and she believes in me, and tomorrow I am going to see my little baby.

"Now, Miss Bly, I am asking to see you this week. My heart-slinging position allows me the hours between 2 p. m. and 6 p. m. daily. I want you to advise me so I make no mistakes in the rest of my life.

"V. C. W."

This is one man who came back before it is too late. He may not realize it, but he had a conscience. And the duty he owed to that child brought him back to work for it and protect and provide for the little life he has brought into existence. And happiness, success and contentment will be his reward.

IN glorious hour the great soul passed,
And he will find his own at last.
Upon the edge of April, while
The Earth is quickening, mile on mile,
His young soul, thrilled by the mystic breath,
Goes singing thru' the doors of death:
He who was comrade to the herds,
He who was brother to the birds,
He who had all the flowers for friends,
Has gone the road that never ends.

Crowned with his golden lore he goes,
While earth is dreaming of the rose;
And as he passes, he can hear
The far song of the flowering year.
While grasses hurry into earth,
He rises to his higher birth,
Where Audubon and Jeffries are,
Exploring nature in their star—
Where Ruskin, lover of old roads,
And Turner, have their bright abodes
He goes and round his head is hurled,
The April vision of the world:
He carries, as his feet depart,
The warm love of the whole world's heart.

LIGHTNING FLASH IS CAUSE OF THUNDER

By Garrett P. Serviss

"A claims that thunder produces lightning, and B claims lightning causes thunder. Please explain how lightning and thunder are produced.—E. C. Roxbury, Mass.

"A" HAS put the cart before the horse, but "B" has replaced the harness where it belongs. Lightning is the cause of thunder, as the explosion of the powder is the cause of the roar of a cannon shot. In both cases the air is set into violent vibration, and the atmospheric waves thus produced impress our ears with the sensation that we call sound.

Some persons are puzzled about thunder because they entertain the singular notion that air is "too soft" to produce sound. They admit that the air can "carry" sound, but think that the sound must first be produced by the impact of solid bodies. The "thunder" of a cannon seems to puzzle them less than that of a thunder storm, because in some confused way they connect the solidity of the cannon with the sound. Apparently they imagine that the cannon itself roars.

Lightning consists of powerful electric discharges occurring between different clouds, or between clouds and earth. A quite ordinary lightning discharge may possess thousands of millions of foot pounds of energy. But a relatively small part of this is expended directly setting up sound waves in the atmosphere. A good deal of the energy is used in producing vibrations that cause no sense of sound, and it has been said that "one really hears only the smallest part of a clap of thunder."

The energy of a thunder clap in one case was found to be nearly 150,000 foot pounds. Most of the energy of lightning is expended in producing heat, and in disrupting objects that it strikes. Its blinding light also accounts for a considerable expenditure of energy. A lightning flash cannot illuminate the country without expense any more than can a system of electric lamps.

To the Editor

Praises American

Editor Boston American:

The action by the House whereby Senate Bill No. 314, known as the Burdette lighting bill, authorizing the lighting companies of Massachusetts to capitalize their premiums, was killed, shows what honest and understandable publicity can do to protect the public from sinister influences represented by the financial and special privilege seeking class. The Boston American has shown that it is immune from corrupt and influential corporations and individuals that are their representatives when seeking legislation. At least 50 million has been saved the electric and gas consumers of Massachusetts.

The Boston American is an asset for the honest average individual to lean upon, and now let it with the backing of the public proceed to compel the reduction in the price of gas and electricity not alone in Boston but in the Commonwealth.

The Boston American with its editorials and liberal news articles plus the City Council of the City of Boston have proven that no sinister special privilege-seeking element can with impunity succeed in placing additional and unjust burdens upon the people's shoulders without a vigorous protest being made. All praise to the Boston American.

APOLOGY IS MADE FOR GIVING ALIBI

By Damon Runyon

Copyright, 1921, by Star Company.

IN the world of sport an "alibi" is the excuse for any shortcoming. The word was appropriated from the legal vocabulary by the sport slangsters and insinuated into the language of the day.

Rarely is an individual or a team beaten that it does not have an "alibi." Lack of condition, the weather, change of climate, a poor field and a thousand and one other reasons are presented as "alibis."

The winner may contend against the very things that are offered by the loser as an "alibi," but it is seldom the winner needs an "alibi."

Dempsey Overtrained

Jack Dempsey, the heavyweight champion, failed to beat Bill Brennan recently as quickly as the sport fraternity thought he should, and Dempsey found it necessary to put forward an "alibi."

Overtraining was his excuse. When Dempsey defeated Jess Willard the ponderous Kansan's "alibi" was undertraining. Mike O'Dowd, beaten for the middleweight championship, had the "alibi" that it was an unjust decision. When Man-o'-War, the race horse, was defeated the only time in his career, the "alibi" was offered that the animal received a poor ride.

Received Skeptically

As a general proposition the "alibi" is received skeptically, and not infrequently with derision. Yet a good "alibi" is often interesting, and sounds better than a plain "unalibied" statement.

For instance, if you are late keeping an appointment, and simply say, "Well, I'm late," and let it go at that, it is apt to sound flat. But if you say, "Well, what do you think? While I was horrying to get down here a building on Tremont Street fell in, and of course I had to stop and look at it," no one can quarrel with you.

We need the "alibi." Without it, how could we explain and excuse our shortcomings? Besides, it is a great mental tonic. If you are badly beaten in a golf match, let us say, it is more encouraging to figure out an "alibi" for your defeat than to admit to yourself that it was probably because you are utterly hopeless as a golf player.

Scandals Among Very Rich

"WHY are scandals so common among the very rich?

Just at present the distressing revelations of the Stillman case have been occupying the attention of the country. In the past there have been other equally sordid cases. In the future there will be others. Most of them will centre around some wealthy man or woman.

Why do not poor people do these things?

Dr. I. L. Nascher, writing for the Boston Sunday Advertiser, declares that these scandals follow naturally from the rich food, self-indulgence and purposeless lives which the very rich, as a rule, live. Then, too, he says, it is a fact that bands and wives among the wealthy are more apt to be separated for long periods of time than their poorer brothers and sisters.

If the fascinating Fifi Potter had married a poor man, the doctor believes, no such scandal would ever have arisen. Dr. Nascher's article appears this week in the Magazine Section.
